Council considers April tax measure

Carmel, Stevenson wage war in pool

Robert Louis Stevenson's Charles Hunter pursues Carmel High's Paul Peterson (8) during a league matchup in the Pirates' pool Tuesday. RLS, buoyed by Hunter's three goals, earned a dramatic 15-12 victory in overtime. For more local sports, please see pages 24, 25 and 28.

Open space purchases at heart of proposal

By PAUL WOLF

THE CARMEL City Council is exploring the possibility of a springtime tax measure to raise funds for the purchase of private properties now facing development.

The council agreed unanimously that April's mayoral and council elections could also include a property tax surcharge to pay for the acquisition of Pescadero Canyon lots and other properties.

"I have sensed a skepticism on the part of the public about general tax increases, but it could be more receptive to a specific tax for a specific purpose," said Carmel City Administrator Jere Kersnar, who recommended that the council explore the ballot item at its meeting Tuesday evening.

The action was a suitable prelude to today's 3:30 p.m. special council meeting in Carmel City Hall, located at Monte Verde, south of Ocean Avenue. The meeting will focus on whether the city should sell three properties: Piccadilly Park, Flanders Mansion and Rio Park.

Keynote sentiment

Councilman Bob Fischer, who long has argued the city lacks funds for new acquisitions, may have hit the keynote, when he said, "I think this is an out-

Yee Steck stands firm as petition for recall gains momentum

By DELIN CORMENY

PARENTS CALLING for Annette Yee Steck to resign have started a petition campaign that could mark the beginning of a long battle to recall the Carmel Unified School District (CUSD) board member.

Yee Steck was criticized and asked to resign by a group of concerned parents after her decision to enroll her 5-year-old son in private school became public.

Despite the pressure, Yee Steck says she will continue to serve on the board and has no intention of stepping down.

"I really feel I haven't done anything wrong," she told The Pine Cone. "The worst thing is I didn't let people know in a more public way than I maybe should have."

Familiar faces at Il Fornaio

Former Pine Inn employees hired; opening set for Oct. 16

By SUSAN BECK

WHILE MANY Carmelites are excited about the upcoming grand opening of the Pine Inn's new Il Fornaio restaurant, it's the anticipation of welcoming the hotel's old regime that is the talk of the town.

When Il Fornaio opens Monday, Oct. 16, Nick del Rosario will be among several former employees working in the 105-year-old establishment's dining room, just as he had for 37 years before losing his job in November 1993.

"I think people will be doing cartwheels up and down Ocean Avenue to see their old friends," Carmel Mayor Ken White said. "It's important for Carmel residents to see these familiar faces. We miss these people so much."

Del Rosario and dozens of other longtime Pine Inn restaurant employees lost their jobs when Marriott Management Services took over the hotel's dining room, bar and banquet facilities.

"I'm happy to be back at the Pine Inn," Del Rosario said. "It's my second home. That's where I met my wife, Sharon, who used to come in with her family."

Family feud

DO NOT invite Dominic Mercurio and John Pisto to the same wharf party!

Or even to the same wharf.

THE TWO highly successful Monterey restaurateurs — who are nephew and uncle, respectively — have been at loggerheads ever since 1989.

Loggerheads is a small, exclusive club for executives of huge lumber companies, and the menu never changes — boiled spotted owl for breakfast, creamed spotted owl for lunch, grilled spotted owl for dinner.

(No, it isn't. I'm sorry. Strike that, and let's go on.)

ANYWAY, 1989 was the year Mercurio sold his interest in Domenico's on Fisherman's Wharf back to Pisto and other partners, and opened Café Fina directly across the wharf walkway.

Pisto filed suit immediately, claiming Mercurio acted illegally, and the six-year cantankerous, peevish crabfest began.

THAT first suit was settled, with both parties promising not to "annoy, alarm, or harass the other" or interfere with the other's business.

Promises, promises.

A SUIT by Pisto alleging such harassment was dismissed in Monterey County Superior Court last month, and now Mercurio has turned the tables, firing a $500,000 salvo in superior court alleging all sorts of rascality by Pisto.

Such as:

■ THAT Pisto stood across from Café Fina with a makeshift megaphone "announcing to the public the Café Fina was a drug front and money laundering business."

■ THAT Pisto smashed a window in Café Fina with a baseball bat.

■ THAT Pisto told vendors that if they continued doing business with Mercurio, Pisto would cease doing business with them.

(In addition to Domenico's, Pisto also owns Abalonetti Trattoria next door to Café Fina on the wharf, Paradiso Trattoria on Cannery Row and Whaling Station Inn on Wave Street.)

■ THAT Pisto was engaging in "false and misleading advertising" by contending his was the only wharf restaurant with a brick oven, "knowing that Café Fina has used one since 1989."

And so on.

PISTO, who has his own laundry list of complaints against Mercurio, is on a cruise ship in the Mediterranean and is not expected back for about two weeks.

Mercurio said of his half-million-dollar suit against Pisto:

"In school you learn that a bully will never stop until you hit back."

NOW about that wharf party you were planning — tell all guests to wear flak suits and hard hats, duck often and serpentine constantly! But more importantly — relax!

P.S. — By the way, lost in all this is the fact that both Café Fina and Domenico's are right fine restaurants.

At Fina, the sand dabs ($6.95 lunch, $11.65 dinner) and the blackened salmon ($10.95 lunch, $14.95 dinner) are unmatched in the free world!

AND at Domenico's, the pasta Capri ($10.95 lunch, $21.95 dinner) is dazzling diners from here to Sicily!

Can't we all just get along?

Business leaders say marketing held key to the bustling summer

By PAUL WOLF

WHILE THERE are clear signs the economy is picking up both nationally and regionally, Carmel and Monterey Peninsula business officials say destination marketing was the key to a brisk summer.

Moreover, they contend it will be a vital part of keeping business strong in the years to come.

"We all realize we are competing more with other destinations, and, finally, we have gotten the commitments we need (to fund marketing programs)," said Toni Jepson, executive director of the Carmel Business Association.

Manette Belliveau

In the village, July, August and September were "quite strong," according to Jepson, in the three telltale sectors: retail, inns and restaurants.

Although room and sales tax figures for the summer will not be available until October and December, respectively, anecdotal reports indicate a bustling season following a notably slow spring.

Cause and effect

Manette Belliveau, executive director of the Monterey Peninsula Visitor & Convention Bureau, credits the good summer, to a large extent, to its pro-

Crime Stoppers group offers reward for leads on alleged drug dealer

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

CRIME STOPPERS of Monterey County (CSMC), a non-profit group that gives citizens a way of supporting law enforcement via anonymous tips, offers a reward of up to $1,000 for information leading to the arrest of Christopher Brendan Burney.

A CSMC bulletin noting the reward said this week that Burney was identified as a suspect in an undercover investigation of Carmel Valley area narcotics traffic.

He sold both cocaine and marijuana to an undercover officer, CSMC said, and a warrant has been issued for his arrest on charges of selling the drugs during July and August of 1992.

The suspect was described as a white male adult, 31 years old, 5-feet-5-inches, 155 pounds, medium build with brown curly hair and brown eyes.

Anyone having knowledge of the suspect — or any other data leading to an arrest — should call 1-800-499-CRIME.

"Callers remain anonymous," said CSMC President Gloria Dial. "Each will get a code number and may be eligible for the reward.

Fred Keeley (waving), chairman of the Santa Cruz County Board of Supervisors, has officially launched his bid for the 27th Assembly District. Here at the Sept. 4 dedication of Cal State University-Monterey Bay, where President Clinton spoke, Keeley is pictured with his wife Maria (right) and former Santa Cruz mayor John Laird.

■ Analysis: Although a political veteran in a largely Democratic district, Fred Keeley confronts 'the jump of Olympian proportions to the right.'

By PAUL WOLF

IT IS a battle against the Republicans and an agenda that, according to candidate Fred Keeley, threatens the very well-being of California.

"If we are going to have a civilized society in the 21st century," said the Democrat, the first official contestant in the race for the 27th State Assembly District, "we must deal with the causes as well as the effects of crime, an educational system that will allow our young people to compete for jobs, and higher education fees that are not out of reach."

The image of Keeley, who made his informal candidacy official last Thursday, entering the ring slugging is a suitable one.

He vies for the seat with the knowledge Republican incumbent Bruce McPherson has already made public his intention to seek the larger 15th State Senate District.

Keeley, chairman of the Santa Cruz County Board of Supervisors, recognizes his status may vacillate between favorite and underdog. True, he is an established Democratic player currently serving in an elected office, but he also recognizes a distinct rightward shift in the political spectrum, which won't be to his advantage.

In his favor

The district — all of Santa Cruz County and the coast half of Monterey County — favors his party 5-to-3 on the registered voter rolls. Should the 45-year-old Boulder Creek resident prevail over his likely Democratic challenger, former Monterey County Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman, in the March primary, he may have a great shot at winning in the November 1996 runoff.

After all, no major COP names have surfaced whatsoever, and no Republicans at all have officially announced their candidacy.

There have been reports that Watsonville businessman and political neophyte Roger Nowell may seek to carry on the new Republican tradition in the district. Also, Ray Jensen, a Prunedale federal employee, has expressed interest in running.

On the other hand, in the context of the mid-1990s, Keeley and other Democrats may feel like David fighting Goliath. Never mind the battles over the Assembly's speakership. Forget legislative blitzes by Republicans at the national level. The makeup of the state legislature, long in Democratic control, is changing.

"One of the underreported stories of 1995 is what is happening in the Assembly," Keeley said. "There is a jump of Olympian proportions to the right."

Changing makeup

At last count, Republicans outnumbered Democrats 40 to 39. Moreover, the most conservative wing of the party — not McPherson's moderate center — is controlling the legislative agenda, Keeley said.

As for the big issues, the candidate has four major areas of concern. They are:

■ The fate of the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), which the Democrats wish to keep fully intact and which Keeley called "one of the most important pieces of legislation this century."

■ Freedom of women to choose abortions, which the candidate supports.

■ Labor interests, which Keeley says are in jeopardy.

■ The integrity of the public school system, which is now the subject of a reform movement Keeley does not believe in.

If Keeley would face challenges as an assemblyman, they are not just partisan; they are budgetary as well. It takes money to reduce class sizes or student fees at community colleges, or to provide job training.

"We have no choice; we have to do these things," Keeley said. "When we needed to build more prisons, we found a way to do that. That was a matter of priorities. Now we have other things we need to accomplish."

Fred Keeley

Gaining a foothold

Keeley, a Santa Cruz supervisor since 1988, is better known on the north end of Monterey Bay, while Strasser Kauffman has a more established reputation on the Monterey Peninsula.

Nevertheless, Keeley, who has been campaigning unofficially since March, has assembled a list of prominent supporters from Monterey County. Most notable among them is Sam Farr, the current Monterey Bay congressman and a former assemblyman in the 27th District. Farr was Keeley's boss from 1984 to 1989 when Keeley served as his chief of staff.

However, of Keeley's 600 or so official supporters throughout the 27th District, most are from up north. "This is still early in the campaign, and I am happy that many of these people (from the Monterey Peninsula) are community leaders in this area."

Although a supporter of campaign finance reform, Keeley will not make the same pledge that was made by Bill Monning, last year's Democratic Assembly candidate, who refused all political action committee (PAC) money.

Keeley said he would be willing to limit individual and PAC contributions to $500 apiece, and total spending to $250,000 in the primary. He said he would not make such commitments unless Strasser Kauffman does likewise.

For now, Keeley is most concerned about securing victory within his own party, confident he can topple a Republican newcomer in November.

But, with the political winds blowing to the right, he knows full well that his challenges would continue from the first day of his initial two-year Assembly term.

Goodenough leaves legacy of charm

Television host is remembered as fun-loving and professional.

By SUSAN BECK

LIFE WITH Michael Fraser Goodenough was an "E-ticket ride," said his wife, Lee, remembering fondly that the 56-year-old Carmel resident and host of The Monterey Show was a great husband and friend.

Mr. Goodenough died of cancer at the Hospice of the Central Coast on Sept. 27.

Born Jan. 27, 1938 in Alhambra, Mr. Goodenough met Lee in Fresno while both were performing in a community play. Along with being active in local theater, he also had an extensive musical career playing trumpet with the Jimmy James Four and Alan and Mayo Show.

After 28 years in the clothing business, Mr. Goodenough moved his family to Pacific Grove and worked as the buyer and advertising manager for Holman's Department Store.

But his true calling came in 1986 when he combined his sales experience with his lifelong love of performing.

After two years on the sales staff of then KMST-TV 46, he moved to MPTV Cable's newly established advertising division — Monterey Peninsula Interconnect (MPI-TV).

"Mike was the cornerstone of The Monterey Show," said Steve Twibell, MPI-TV general sales manager. "He was the consummate salesperson and he always looked at the positive side of things. He tried to make everyone feel comfortable and understand that he was OK even though he was dying. It's tragic for us. He didn't tell anyone until the last."

Mr. Goodenough was especially known for his easy manner and witty rapport with restaurateur John Pistó during the cooking segment of The Monterey Show, which he hosted and produced.

"I will always remember his great sense of humor," said Mr. Goodenough's assistant Brad Harlan, who will now host the show. "Mike was one of my big champions. We shared an office and going to work was always fun. His are huge shoes to fill. It will be difficult for me. But I've learned from the master, and standing idea. Instead of a small group of people telling us how to act, we will have a big group — our boss, the general public — telling us what to do."

Tax measure could go to Carmel voters in April '96

According to Kersnar, the tax could be either a percentage of the current property tax, or a set amount paid by each household.

How much money would be raised or how much each household would pay has not been worked out, Kersnar said. However, he expects the council and administration to flesh out the details over the course of the next three months.

The council has gone on record as supporting the preservation of six vacant lots in the Carmel portion of Pescadero Canyon, located in the forested, steep-sloped northern edge of Carmel near 2nd Avenue.

The city has explored land swaps to acquire the lots and considered "specific" zoning plans to limit its development. "There has been little progress," Kersnar said.

Meanwhile, property owners have grown more frustrated and impatient with the passing of each year.

On Tuesday, the council agreed it would not put itself in danger of having a judge require the city to buy out property owners — which could turn into a financial disaster.

The tax idea has the flavor of "do or die" for Pescadero Canyon preservation efforts.

"The people should have the opportunity to vote," said resident Pat Sippel during the public hearing.

Kersnar said the council may wish to use the new revenue source to accomplish other goals besides Pescadero Canyon purchases. These include:

- The purchase of the Probasco Property, which borders Mission Trail Park at the end of 11th Avenue.
- Beach improvements.
- Development of recreation facilities, including a ballpark at Rio Park, the city-owned flood plain immediately south of the city limits.
- Improvements to Forest Hill Park.

Fischer and Mayor Ken White also discussed the possibility of drawing from the surcharge's additional revenues to address millions of dollars in overdue public works projects.

Group of CUSD parents gets petition rolling

While several hundred signatures have already been collected, campaign organizers say their mission has just begun.

About a dozen parents who vented their displeasure at last Thursday's school board meeting reassured board members that the campaign to recall Yee Steck will continue indefinitely.

"All these people have lost faith in your judgment," Nicole Knovick told Yee Steck, as she held up petitions to demonstrate her point. "All these people are asking that you step down."

Although the petition is only a request for Yee Steck's resignation, it could double as the formal petition needed to put a recall vote into motion, said Sandy Baysinger.

At least 3,560, or 20 percent of the voters registered within CUSD's boundaries — Carmel, unincorporated Carmel, Carmel Valley and Big Sur — must sign the formal petition before a new election is considered.

"There are very strong feelings about it amongst the voters," said Baysinger, who called Yee Steck's decision a "vote of no faith in the public school system."

The CUSD parent noted that the core issue was Yee Steck's failure to publicize her decision before the end of school board election filing period in mid-August. Her seat went unchallenged, thus precluding elections.

"We find it very difficult to live with the fact that we were not informed before the filing date closed," Baysinger said. "Now we are forced to live with it for the next four years."

Yee Steck said that when she decided to send her son to All Saints' Episcopal Day School, she didn't expect it to become a big issue: "But hindsight is always 20/20. Now I can say I blew it. Now I realize people think it's a big deal."

Yee Steck further challenged parents to assess her competence as a board member and base their dissatisfaction on her performance rather than focus on the decision to send her son to private school or on her lack of public disclosure.

"If they show me I'm not doing a good job, that's when I'll step down," she said. "If I'm not showing up at meetings, if I'm making bad decisions, if they said, 'you blew it on that budget,' or 'I don't like your curriculum,' that's different. But people are telling me I made a bad choice personally. I can't let that bother me."

Projects to be autumn disruption

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE CARMEL Public Works Department hopes residents will tolerate some additional disruption now in order to have less of it during the holiday season.

"There are more than the usual number of projects going on right now," said Public Works Director Jim Cullem. "Summer is the time when we have a lot of visitors, so during the fall their is a narrow window of opportunity to get much work done."

Here is a brief look at the ongoing and newly completed projects:

- Repaving of Seventh between Junipero and San Carlos, along with drainage improvements at the intersection of Mission and Seventh. Cost to the city: $85,000.

CSUMB president takes to the classroom

■ Making good on his promise to be a working, in-the-trenches leader, Peter Smith says that ProSeminar may be wave of the future in education.

By PAUL WOLF

"Learners taking the ProSeminar will choose their own capstone projects in their exit year."

THE INNOVATIVE academic trail at CSU-Monterey Bay is rapidly being blazed by an assortment of exotic new terms.

The above are the words founding President Peter Smith, who is one of the best people for elucidating such ideas — since he and the other founding deans and faculty helped invent them.

Smith is making good on his promise to be a working, in-the-trenches kind of president: He is teaching a section (two hours on Monday evenings) of the ProSeminar, a mandatory course for the university's 175 freshmen that will recur in some form in each year of undergraduate study.

"This class is a mentoring, planning and educational experience that will culminate in the exit year, the senior year, with a capstone experience," Smith said.

Peter Smith . . .
'Walk the walk, talk the talk'

In simple terms, freshmen and sophomores will be responsible for shaping their academic programs and goals, and juniors for preparing to enter the job market or progress to higher education.

ProSeminar is touted as that place where the real world and academia collide and where present needs and future goals merge.

Too often, Smith insists, students are just thrown into the woods of academia. "Here, we will teach them about maps and compasses; how to prepare a campsite, how to dress," he said.

The key, however, is that the students must orient themselves, figure out destinations for themselves. Educators provide the tools and certain information.

"If I wanted to do this right, I knew I had to walk the walk as well as talk the talk," Smith said, noting he will try to commit to some involvement in teaching each year.

Active learning

The ProSeminar will also help coordinate internships, part-time jobs, volunteer work, various entrepreneurial experiments and other forms of active learning, which is to characterize the CSUMB approach to learning.

The ProSeminar will help students acquire the skills and knowledge they need for accomplishing their goals, Smith explained.

"We expect learners to take greater responsibility, to be partners in learning," Smith said, noting there is a "strong counseling element" to the ProSeminar. "It is aimed at creating a seamless connection between the students' learning now and their future after CSUMB."

If there is nothing completely new under the sun, then it may be helpful to think of senior ProSeminar, which is still being developed, as similar to senior "placement" counseling.

A "capstone" project, meanwhile, equates roughly to the senior project. Freshman ProSeminar, with its class and lab components, is much like guidance counseling.

"The idea is original with CSUMB," Smith said. "We needed to create a different approach to curriculum. The faculty and students here are committed to developing new forms."

Smith said the ProSeminar is being studied by "observers" and has the potential to catch on well beyond CSUMB. "Once this thing gets refined, it could be a significant addition to higher education nationally."

For all his unbridled enthusiasm, the president recognizes "we are taking a risk" in these new forms of learning and teaching. But he notes: "The pur-

Hunches pay off in arrest of shoplifters

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

TIME AND again, Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras of the Carmel Police Department has asked merchants and general citizens to phone with tips about any suspicious-looking individuals in the village.

And now, Poitras said this week, such a call has paid off with the arrests of two accused shoplifters.

He described them as unrelated even though they have the same last name — Raquel Diaz, 19, Seaside, and Maria Diaz, 18, Monterey. They were released on citation and face arraignment in Monterey Municipal Court on Oct. 12.

Poitras said they stole a $160 ceramic clown from Handworks, a downtown gift shop on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth.

Empty shopping bags

The manager of Stefan Mann leather goods store called police about the pair "because they entered that site with empty shopping bags in hand and tried to create distractions," Poitras added.

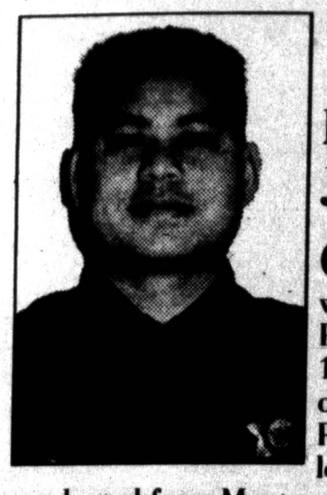
"We always ask observers to follow their hunches," the detective said, "and that's what the manager did. Our people — officers Mel Mukai and Mike Calhoun, plus Sgt. Bill Uretsky — located the suspects. The theft was revealed, and our guys determined that the two had entered other shops with the idea of stealing items."

The district attorney's office filed the charges — three counts each of misdemeanor burglary (entering with intent) and one apiece of petty theft.

"There has been a marked increase in shoplifting reports over recent weeks," Poitras said. "If we can continue getting the kind of help that the Stefan Mann manager gave, we can stem the flow."

Police Profiles

CARMEL POLICE DEPARTMENT



Meet John Nyunt...

OFFICER JOHN Nyunt was hired by the Carmel Police Department on Jan. 16, 1991. A lifelong resident of the Monterey Peninsula, John attended local grade schools and graduated from Monterey High in 1981. From there, he enrolled in Monterey Peninsula College, graduating in 1984 with a degree in administration of justice.

During the next five years, John worked at a local nursery where he developed a keen interest in horticulture and landscape design, an avocation he continues to pursue today.

Although successful in horticulture, John had always desired a career in law enforcement. In pursuit of this goal, he applied to and was quickly accepted by the Sacramento Police Academy in 1990. There he excelled as a student, graduating No. 1 in his class.

While attending the police academy, John volunteered his services as a police intern with the Sacramento Police Department, acquiring valuable law enforcement experience which has served him well here in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

During the five years that Officer Nyunt has served our community, he has distinguished himself on numerous occasions, most notably his rescue of an elderly woman from a burning building in 1991 and the arrest of the "Interstate Five Bandits" in early 1993. He was also recognized as the Department's "Employee of the Year" in 1993. John is one of our most capable officers. His innate intelligence, initiative, and sense of fairness have made him a popular figure, not only with his peers in the department, but within community as well.

John lives in Monterey with his wife and two children. In his spare time he enjoys gardening, hiking, reading and playing his saxophone.

He also is an accomplished writer of short stories. He hopes to complete his first novel within the next few years.

He also donates his time to the Lyceum of Monterey County, teaching children ages six to nine about the law enforcement field. If all that were not enough, John is also working toward a degree in public administration.

'Police Profiles' will run every other week in The Pine Cone, and features different members of the Carmel Police Department. It is the newspaper's hope that citizens, through this series, will become better acquainted with those who serve the community in such an important — albeit sometimes

Il Fornaio: New place, familiar faces

In June 1994, Marriott shut down its operation. Nine months later, the San Francisco-based Il Fornaio America Co. signed a 20-year lease with Pine Inn Richard Cunner to operate and remodel the dining room.

In May, work began to restore some of the dining room's early 1920s style, according Jon Wilson, general manager of the Pine Inn.

"I think it's really slick," he said. "They are trying to recapture the way it used to be."

Wilson noted the working relationship with Il Fornaio's staff has been excellent.

"They're real service-oriented and enthusiastic about the community," he said. "They mailed out special notices to our former employees to apply for work. It's going to be wonderful to see the old familiar faces again. They were always excellent employees and it's great to get them back to the Pine Inn."

Il Fornaio also has opened it arms to members of the community by lending the dining room to local non-profit organizations for fund-raising benefits.

Making its debut

The various groups — Carmel Public Library Foundation, Monterey County Symphony, Carmel Celebrates Community, American Red Cross Carmel Chapter, Carmel Heritage and Friends of Carmel Forest — will hold their events next week.

"It's been a practice of ours from the first restaurant we opened to lend our facilities to local agencies," said Michael Mindel, director of marketing for 12 Il Fornaio restaurants from Marin County to Del Mar in Southern California.

"Everything is free," he added. "They make a lot of money and we get to introduce ourselves to the community. And the best news is that they will know a lot of people who are working for us. It's thrilling to me that a guy like Nick can be with us. It's really exciting for us to hire these people who were long-standing employees of the Pine Inn."

Il Fornaio manager Alex Heid said Del Rosario was hired on the spot: "I simply believe some things should stay the same. His familiarity with the customers is so important to us."

Carmel resident Chuck Poland said his family is excited about seeing the old-time employees at Il Fornaio's grand opening.

"For me and my family, the employees made going to the Pine Inn fun," said Poland, whose family dined at the hotel at least once a week for 13 years. "They deserve to get better than they had. It will make my heart feel good to see them again."

Projects aplenty . . .

Silver Jones succumbs; Il Fornaio to take flight

WILD THINGS ... Carmel's Dana Branner believes that the holidays — like big businesses everywhere — are actually MERGING!

He said this with obvious distress after returning from the Target store in Salinas where he saw:

A Christmas tree decorated entirely with orange lights and jack-o'-lanterns!

"How come no turkey on there for Thanksgiving?" we asked him.

"IT really didn't need one," he replied. "'Turkey' was the first word that came to mind when I saw the tree."

Touché.

MONTEREY'S Denise Quinn doesn't like the new breed of perky waiters any better than the old breed of perky waiters.

Her current pet annoyance is waiters (and waitresses) who say "Good choice" immediately after you make your selection from the menu.

"IT was bad enough when waiters used to introduce themselves to us at the table," she says, "but now they're critiquing us!"

(Everybody's a critic, Denise.)

PROVING once more that the restaurant business is maybe the toughest living of all, Silver Jones went belly-up last week.

The demise of the first-rate Carmel Barnyard eatery was taken philosophically by owner Jack Silver:

"AFTER eight years," he said, "I believe I gave it a pretty good run. But it's time to move on. I'm getting married soon, and then I'm going to take advantage of some new career opportunities."

Would-be successors are already lining up at The Barnyard to take over the restaurant.

PSST! — Is that long-dormant hotel construction directly across Wave Street from the Sardine Factory about to come alive?

It looks promising, with the astute owners of nearby Monterey Plaza Hotel being the likely rescuers.

ONWARD ... Pine Inn's restaurant and bar facilities — fallow since June of last year — will do the Phoenix thing on Monday, Oct. 16.

The food and drink concessions have been taken over by Il Fornaio, a chain of 10 Italian restaurants throughout California.

THE restaurant, itself, will be called Il Fornaio, will include a retail bakery, and will be open for breakfast, lunch and dinner seven days a week.

David Beckwith, owner of the recent Central 159 restaurant in Pacific Grove, will be the chef.

ACCORDING to Pine Inn owner Richard Gunner of Fresno, Il Fornaio is being designed to fit in with the very ornate Victorian furnishings in the hotel's newly remodeled lobby.

Can't wait to see how that could possibly be done! (Or why.)

ERNIE'S in San Francisco, the best restaurant I ever had the pleasure of eating in, closed forever last weekend, and the world is poorer for it.

Owners Victor and Roland Gotti, unpretentious gentlemen of rare class, turned out the lights in the 61-year-old gastronomic shrine Saturday night and quietly walked off into the night.

I'VE said more than once, when the warden asks what I want for my last meal, I'll reply:

"The sweetbreads at Ernie's, with their bananas Foster for dessert!"

NOW it will never happen, so to hell with the warden and godspeed to the Gottis!

In the worst of all possible anticlimaxes, the building that housed the 32-time Mobil 5-Star Award winner has been sold to a 34-year-old Los Angeles nightclub owner.

THAT worthy has announced plans to knock out walls, build a stage and create "an entertainment complex with class."

To 34-year-old Angelenos, "class" means you have to wear a shirt and both shoes.

Joe Fitzpatrick's column appears weekly in The Pine Cone.

McPherson to speak in P.B. on Oct. 16

THE NEW Forum will present "What's Going On In Sacramento?" by Assemblyman Bruce McPherson, R-Santa Cruz, at a noon luncheon Monday, Oct. 16 at the Lodge at Pebble Beach. Admission: $16. Reservations: 375-4518.

motion efforts during the months of April, May and June.

The three-month campaign, Belliveau said, countered the negative images created by the Jan. 10 and March 10 floods, which delayed the Visitor & Convention Bureau's customary marketing efforts by four weeks.

"The impacts of the floods on business didn't last as long as we expected," she said. "Most of our business comes from California, and I think people have forgotten (the disasters) quite quickly."

The state's economic rebound has matched that being experienced nationally, Belliveau said. But despite an increase in domestic travel, international tourism is down roughly 11 percent on the Monterey Peninsula, she added.

Increased spending for marketing also has been secured by the City of Monterey, Monterey County and the Monterey County Travel and Tourism Alliance.

Jepson spoke highly of these commitments, saying, "Every time someone else is out there aggressively marketing, they are taking potential business away from us."

Jepson said dozens of articles about Carmel have appeared in newspapers and magazines as a result of public relations work the CBA has contracted out to the Southern California-based Murphy /O'Brien Communication.

There is quantifiable evidence of the local program's success, Jepson said. For example, the CBA counted 1,855 inquiry calls in a span of three days following the Los Angeles Times' article in the travel section of its Sunday, Aug. 6 edition.

The CBA budgeted $81,500 for the project this year, a sum that includes the PR contract as well as expenses, Jepson said. The return on that investment in the form of overnight visitors and retail trade far exceeds the cost, Jepson said.

Meanwhile, the CBA has not yet received its first payment from the City of Carmel, which this year has committed $100,000 to the organization for further marketing efforts. Although the agreement was worked out this summer between the city and the CBA, the first check won't be written until November, Jepson said.

Supes postpone action for traffic relief on Carmel Hill

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

A PROPOSAL asking the state Department of Transportation to speed up its plans to reduce traffic congestion at Carmel Valley Road and Highway 1 has been postponed until later this month.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday to review the written statement to Caltrans at its Oct. 24 meeting. The document will request that Caltrans start work on road improvements sooner that the scheduled date in early 1996, according to Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas.

The Fifth District supervisor urged board members to put pressure on Caltrans to start work as soon as possible to relieve the constant traffic jam on Carmel Hill.

The improvements include a lane from Carmel Valley Road north on Highway 1 to Morse Drive and a second right-turn merge lane on Carmel Valley Road from Carmel Rancho Boulevard to Highway 1.

Livingston's motto is common sense commission. Mayor Ken White informs Carmel residents that they may pick up applications at city hall to fill the vacancy.

"Common sense is my motto," said Livingston, a six-year Carmel resident who is retired from the women's clothing business. (The Livingston Bros. chain was in business in the San Francisco Bay Area for 116 years.)

Livingston, 73, acknowledged that Carmel is primarily a residential town, but a balance must be struck between the residential and commercial communities.

"No one should feel as though they aren't being treated fairly," he said.

White noted the Carmel City Council has decided no longer to interview candidates publicly at city hall, as it has done since 1992. Both Hardy and Livingston have gone through the rigorous public process.

In general, few candidates and observers of the process had good things to say about it, and council members have come to believe public interviews are not necessary to select qualified commissioners.

White said he also will try to fill two other vacancies — one of the five-person Carmel Preservation Committee, the other on the five-member Carmel Library Board.

He said Bruce Kibby has left the historic preservation committee and John Hicks has stepped down from the library board.

Defense Language Institute opens enrollment to civilian students

MONTEREY'S DEFENSE Language Institute is now accepting applications from civilians, due to legislation authored by Rep. Sam Farr in April of 1994.

Enrollment of civilians will be conducted on a two-year, space-available test basis. Applicants must be U.S. citizens and high school graduates, and must meet the same entrance requirements as do military students, including minimum aptitude test scores for basic courses or minimum proficiency test scores for intermediate or advanced courses.

Using a 1:5 instructor to student ratio and providing 35 contact hours of intensive instruction to each student each week, DLI teaches courses in 24 discrete languages and dialects. Courses vary in length from 25 to 63 weeks.

I hope a little of his personality will continue to shine through the show."

Recalling how her husband of 35 years always encouraged her to "be the captain of her own ship," Lee said she will continue to work as a Realtor for The Mitchell Group. She also is an owner of The Secret Garden, a shop in Carmel.

"I'd like to thank everyone in the community for all their cards and for taking care of us," she said. "My children — Mark, Mick and Melissa — and I appreciate the prayers, concern and love that has been expressed to us. So many people cared about Mike."

Mr. Goodenough also is survived by his mother, Isabel Craighead, and two brothers, Bruce and Tim. Services have been held. The family suggests that any memorial contributions be sent to the Hospice of the Central Coast.

Air Force's 454th plans 50th reunion in Vegas this month

BEHIND THE numbers are a lot of brave men — the 15th Air Force's 454th Bombardment Group. Squadrons 736, 737, 738 and 739.

Chuck Poland, local spokesperson and former pilot with the 739th, says these units will hold their 50th reunion at the Hacienda Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas.

Dates: Oct. 15 to 20. "It has been half a century," Poland explains, "since we left Italy in 1945."

Any erstwhile member of the 454th is welcome. Poland may be reached at 625-0147.

"We flew B-24 bombers and had total losses of 68 aircraft," he explains. "There were 10 men and 6,000 pounds of bombs per plane."

D.C. foundation puts out call for veterans to enroll in 'Navy Log'

AS PART of its commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II, the Navy Memorial Foundation is currently holding a nationwide search for naval service veterans (Navy, Coast Guard, Marines, Merchant Marine and reservists) from any era to inform them of their eligibility to enroll in the Navy Log in Washington, D.C.

The permanent and publicly accessible video register currently contains names and service information of 225,000 present and former naval personnel. The log is part of the U.S. Navy Memorial and Naval Heritage Center.

Enrollment may be completed by sending a veteran's name, date and place of birth, dates of naval service, highest rate or rank, service branch, and a $25 tax-deductible enrollment donation to Navy Log-Dept. V, P.O. Box 96570, Washington, DC 20077-7685. A head-and-shoulders portrait photo may be added for an additional $25 (photos cannot be returned).

Sponsored enrollments are welcome from relatives of deceased naval veterans.

HOW MUCH DO YOU KNOW ABOUT ANIMALS?

You may love animals and have pets of your own, but how much do you really know about animals? There are many organizations and charities that specialize in caring for or teaching people about different kinds of animals. The SPCA is one such organization. We care for all animals, large and small, domestic and wild.

There are other organizations that specialize in helping one type of animal, from sea otters to birds. If you are interested in a certain kind of animal, for instance – horses, cats or wildlife, and you would like to work with others who have the same interest, you can find out about those groups at the upcoming "Day for the Animals" at Del Monte Shopping Center on October 7, 1995. Del Monte Shopping Center and The SPCA work together each year to put on this event so that people can find out about the many groups that have animal's interests at heart.

"Day" will feature animal information booths from a wide variety of organizations whose primary goal is animal welfare. There will also be animal product booths, as well as many fun activities that you and your pet can take part in - such as doggie makeovers, a pet fashion show and pet tricks. For more information about "Day for the Animals" contact The SPCA of Monterey County, 373-2631 or 422-4721.

NOTE: Animals pictured are subject to prior adoption or return to owner/companion. Adoptions are to qualified homes only. If these animals have been adopted, there are other adorable animals available... come on out! AND, PLEASE, HAVE YOUR PETS SPAYED OR NEUTERED

We make a donation to The SPCA the first time you use our service.

Goph & Co.

MASTER CRAFTSMAN Goph Albitz has designed and made exquisite jewelry in Carmel for more than 20 years.

Albitz's award winning designs — he's best known for his inlay and diamond stacking rings — have been shown in fine galleries and shops throughout the country.

With Albitz's industrial aerospace design experience and unique use of more than 35 different stones, his inlay pieces are extraordinary. The newest collection is now on display at Goph and Co. in the Mission Patio between Fifth and Sixth.

The shop offers a wide range of jewelry, from pearls to bezel-set stones to hand-made one-of-a-kind pieces, including elegant pieces made with Australian opals.

Custom designing also is an economically cleaver way to create a new and special piece from stones set in jewelry that is no longer worn.

Goph and Co. is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday through Saturday. Further information, or an appointment, is available by calling 625-1001.

Malcolm Moran Studios

Malcolm Moran is noted for a unique line of childrens' sculpture reflecting more than 30 poses, which are shown in 40 galleries throughout the country.

The appeal of Malcolm Moran's sculpted children is universal. The artist shows a special gift for capturing the essence of a child's freedom, simplicity and spontaneity. All of his sculptures stand on organic bases integrating direct metal with the cast figures.

Moran's famous "Boy with Kite" is the prototype for all of his childrens' sculptures.

The success of Moran's work is rooted in the belief that art should be lived with and enjoyed by everyone, not just the very wealthy.

It's worth a visit just to see these wonderful art pieces at Moran's Mission Patio Studio on Mission between Fifth and Sixth in Carmel.

Further information is available by calling the gallery's director, Jodi Moran, at 626-3300.

Avoid the most common mutual fund mistakes

IF YOU own mutual funds, you've already taken an important step toward diversifying and managing your investments. To be even more successful as a mutual fund investor, you should also try to avoid some of the most common mistakes.

■ Don't automatically buy the hottest funds. If you're considering a mutual fund that has performed exceptionally well during the past few months, take a closer look before you invest. Check out the fund's performance for the past three to five years.

If the fund has consistently performed in the top half of its peer group, that's a good sign. But if the fund hasn't been around that long, or it has consistently trailed the pack, its current hot streak may not mean much.

■ Don't be too quick to sell. Like most investments, mutual funds go through up and down cycles. If you did your research before you invested, and you were comfortable with your fund when you bought it, don't rush to sell if recent performance has been off. Even the best mutual fund may need 12 to 18 months to get back on track.

■ Don't hold on forever. This may seem inconsistent with the advice above, but it's just the other side of the coin.

No matter how patient you are, some mutual funds never get back on track. Perhaps there's been a change in top management, or the fund has changed its investment style, or maybe the fund has simply gotten too large. If you've given your fund a fair chance and it still hasn't recovered, consider replacing it.

■ Don't invest without a plan. Mutual funds should be purchased as part of an overall investment plan. For example, you should have a goal for how much of your portfolio you want invested in stocks and stock mutual funds, and how much you want invested in bonds and bond mutual funds. The younger you are, the more likely you are to favor stocks, which have performed better than bonds over the long term.

Give your life insurance a year-end checkup

When was the last time you reviewed your life insurance? If it has been more than a year, now might be a good time for an insurance checkup.

If you originally bought life insurance to protect your family, make sure that you still have enough coverage. If you recently got married, had a child or purchased a home, you may need more insurance.

On the other hand, you may be able to trim your coverage if you have recently divorced or retired, or if a child is no longer financially dependent on you.

Even if you have the right amount of life insurance, you may have the wrong beneficiaries. For example, an old life insurance policy may name your parents instead of your spouse, or you may have forgotten to remove an ex-spouse. As part of your insurance checkup, make sure that the proceeds from your policy will go to the right beneficiary.

If you own a cash value life policy that's more than few years old, ask your insurance agent for a free financial analysis, known as an "inforce illustration." Your agent can use this illustration to review the growth of your cash value and determine if your policy is performing up to original expectations. You also should ask your agent to investigate the financial health of your current insurer.

If you own term life insurance, see if it makes sense to convert to a cash value policy, or vice versa. Ask your agent if it's possible to switch to a less expensive policy.

Inaugural Harvest Moon Fest set for Saturday

By JOHN DETRO
Pine Cone Religion Editor

SOME POETS called her The Old White One and said she gave grain and honeybees to Britain's first farmers.

Other bards agreed on one powerful name — Anna — and knew her as "God's grandmother."

Phorcis, Marpessa, Branwen — it seems her various aspects always have been part of our mortal yearning for immortal truths.

On Saturday in Carmel, some of her celebrants will enjoy the Harvest Moon Festival at the Unitarian Universalist Church. Address: 490 Aguajito Rd. (near the Pebble Beach/Pacific Grove exit from Highway 1).

Then and there, she will be perceived as the dynamic and overarching essence — "Mother Earth and the feminine nature of The Divine" rather than some specific, tribal goddess.

So says Margaret Keip, co-pastor of the church with her husband, Fred. The community fundraiser, she adds, will run 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. and take its shape "from committees within the congregation, plus people not connected with us — those who simply rented booth space."

Promised at the church's first such get-together are more than 20 outlets for seasonal goodies, psychics, readers, crafts and the like. There will be music, line dancing and no admission charge.

This figure — The Green Man — was used by designer Helene Constant on flyers for Saturday's Harvest Moon Festival at Unitarian Universalist Church in Carmel. "He's an ancient image of our oneness with nature," she explains.

"Ancient people knew better than ourselves," says event spokesperson Helene Constant, "how to achieve oneness with nature. A good way is by celebrating the seasons. On Saturday, the Goddess people will welcome winter with one of her priestesses — Ana Niamh Redhawk of Big Sur."

"We embrace," Marge explains, "the faith journeys of our members. We don't have a doctrine on the nature of God. For many members, particularly women, emphasizing the feminine nature of The Divine proves more satisfactory than the traditional masculine imagery we have grown up with.

"Theologians understand, by and large, that God has no gender. We assign a gender to render God more personal. As I say, we support the journeying and the exploration."

For the youngsters

Children's activities on Saturday will include making dolls and masks, storytellers, gourd painting, spin painting, treasure pouches and more. Members of the congregation will oversee these.

Jane Rekendal, Barbara Derbyshire and Jane Parker have strong roles in organizing the festival.

Part of the proceeds will go into the support of church programs. Information: 624-7404.

Community Church to focus on author's video

COMMUNITY CHURCH of the Monterey Peninsula will offer public programs at 2 and 7 p.m. today at the Carmel Valley site.

Both time slots will feature the viewing and discussion of a Thomas Moore video, whereon the author speaks about spirituality in everyday life.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Ira Nevin's family had built brick ovens for generations. In the 1940s a friend turned Nevins in a new direction. The friend owned one of the few pizzerias in New York at that time. He told Nevins that ovens took 20 minutes to bake pizza — too long. In his father's basement, with tips from Dad, Nevins built a 9-minute metal oven that was the forerunner of today's gas and electric models. Since then Nevins' company in New Rochelle, New York, has made ovens for about half of all U.S. pizzerias. At 86, Nevins is chairman of the board, wears a lab coat and still seeks new modications of his ovens.

After loss to K.C., Carmel invades Alisal (0-4) with eyes on a victory

By DOUG THOMPSON

A SEASON ago, Alisal High blazed out of the gates with six consecutive victories, including a 34-7 romp over Carmel High. The Trojans' first-ever bid for a Central Coast Section playoff berth came to a screeching halt, however, when they dropped their final four games.

Now, a year later, Alisal is starting on a much different note. After last week's heartbreaking one-point loss to Gonzales, the Trojans, who, according to the San Jose Mercury News in its pre-season analysis "could have its best team ever," are 0-4 overall and 0-1 in the Mission Trail Athletic League.

That means the Trojans will take an eight-game losing streak into Friday night's contest against visiting Carmel High. The MTAL matchup, which pits two teams in need of a victory, will kick off at 7:30 p.m. at Alisal High.

Golden Anderson was back in the starting lineup after a Week 1 injury.

"We're coming off a game where we had a great effort," said Carmel head coach Mike Kelly of last Friday nights' 27-7 loss at King City. "We need to keep making strides."

And the first-year coach believes this week's opposition gives the Padres, 1-3 overall and 0-1 in league, a solid chance at breaking into the MTAL win column.

Even though Alisal is winless in four tries, it did take a 13-0 lead into the fourth quarter of last Friday night's game against Gonzales — a team that earlier in the season knocked off one of the CCS's top-ranked teams, Independence High.

Gonzales scored two touchdowns, and held off a late Alisal drive, to escape with a 14-13 triumph in the MTAL opener for both teams.

Ray of sunshine

One player the Padres will have to try to corral is halfback Jeff Ray (6-1, 160), who waltzed for 186 yards on the ground and one touchdown against Gonzales.

"He's lightning fast," Kelly said. "He's probably the fastest guy we'll face all year."

Alisal will have its hands full as well. In last week's game at King City, the Padres welcomed back junior running back Ben Armbrust (5-8, 160), who had been sidelined with a broken collarbone.

In his first game action of the season, Armbrust — who scored 11 touchdowns for the CHS frosh-soph

Powerful Palma prevails again as Stevenson dumped, 42-10

By JOHN DAVI

IT'S HOMECOMING weekend as the Robert Louis Stevenson varsity football team takes on King City High in what should be a stiff challenge for the win-hungry Pirates.

Stevenson, which would like nothing more than to avenge last Friday's 42-10 Mission Trail Athletic League-opening loss to Palma, has its work cut out against the Mustangs, 2-2, who are coming off a 20-point win over Carmel in which they rushed for more than 300 yards.

The RLS-King City kickoff is set for 2 p.m. Saturday in Pebble Beach.

"Great runners"

Stevenson head coach Jeff Young dismissed any possible doubts about his team's ability.

King City "has two great runners (Cecil Nightingale and Mark Villaneuva)," he said, "and we've got to stop those guys. But we're every bit as confident after playing Palma. The things we did right against Palma will help against King City this weekend."

(Against Carmel last Friday night, Nightingale rushed for 168 yards, while Villaneuva had 69.)

The Pirates did indeed have their moments while battling the Chieftains. RLS was able to garner 14 first downs to Palma's 16 — and passed for 108 yards as compared to Palma's 38.

The scoreboard totals can be attributed — at least partially — to Stevenson's significant lack of players.

Where Palma runs a substitution-based team, with mostly different players on offense and defense, most Pirate players are forced to play both ways.

Pass connected

The Pirate scores came on a second-quarter field goal by Brian Carmichael from 31 yards out, and a 21-yard Mike Bennett touchdown toss to Pete Stocker in the fourth quarter.

Running back Brandon Sams was hushed for the first time all season, collecting only 31 yards on nine carries. Quarterback Bennett finished the night with eight completions in 19 tries.

"Our kids played as winners," Young said, "even though they lost. Now we've got to come back and prove ourselves again."

In last season's matchup, the Mustangs topped RLS, 31-21, in King City.

Setting the record straight . . .

HOW QUICKLY can we forget? Well, some Pine Cone readers may have thought our memories too short of Monty Feekes, former Carmel High School baseball and football coach and athletic director.

In last week's front-page story on the Palma High football program, we made reference to Jared Feekes (currently a wide receiver for the Chieftains) and said he is the son of Marty Feekes.

No, Monty, we haven't forgotten you. We know better — something got lost in translation on the editing desk.

The Pine Cone apologizes to Monty, one of the many good guys who have walked through the halls at CHS.

Cardamone, Atrilla keep torrid pace as CHS harriers sparkle

THE CARMEL High School girls cross country team continued its torrid pace in beating Notre Dame and York over a three-mile course last Thursday at Toro Park.

The Padres are giving indications they may be the team to beat this year as the top three finishers all were from Carmel. It was Denise Cardamone and Martta Atrilla leading the pack again and blowing away the competition as they paced each other through the course.

Cardamone finished one second ahead of Atrilla at 20:55. Molly Allen finished right behind them. Kristine Tate finished seventh to round out the Padres' domination.

The Carmel boys finished behind Palma and York. Brian Johnson placed ninth.

"We only have one senior on the boys team and we keep improving as a team," said John Ables, CHS head coach.

Sadie Thomas and Marlo Milligan put up strong individual efforts with their all-around play. April Allard excelled in the Notre Dame game with her hitting.

"We're a young team, but we're starting to come together and should start winning some more games," said senior standout Andra Faverty. The girls host Santa Catalina today at 3:30 p.m. at the CHS gym.

■ GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

The Padres are on a tough four-game skid, losing their last four matches to Gonzales, Alisal, King City and Notre Dame. Over the last two weeks, the girls saw their record fall to 1-4 in the Mission Trail Athletic League.

■ GIRLS TENNIS

The Padres are keeping a steady pace with a 2-3 record in league and 4-4 overall.

Carmel knew coming into the season that Santa Catalina, Robert Louis Stevenson and York would be the powerhouses in the MTAL. Its concerns were valid as it was shut out by each of those teams.

On a brighter note, the Padres were in good spirits after their 4-3 victory over Pacific Grove last Thursday. Each of the four singles players, including Whitney Fisher and Anna Sanchez (both by 6-0, 6-0 scores) registered victories.

No. 2 singles player Shannon Dougherty has been a steady force for the Padres, who play four matches in four days beginning Tuesday at home against Alisal.

Tennis, volleyball teams nab wins

THE ROBERT Louis Stevenson girls' tennis team, now 4-1 in Mission Trail Athletic League play, will make the short trip to Pacific Grove today to take on the Breakers.

PG has stumbled recently, and now has a 1-4 league record.

Last Thursday's hosting of Notre Dame evidenced only one Pirate misstep in the 6-1 RLS victory — that coming on a tight, three-set loss from the third doubles team of Zoe Johns and Julia Cohen, 7-6, (7-5), 6-1.

Elsewhere, the Pirates continued their steady level of play, which featured a 6-0, 6-0 drubbing by junior Jayme Colker in the No. 2 singles spot and a 6-2, 6-0 win posted by the No. 3 player, Vivian Sam.

■ VOLLEYBALL

The Pirates will travel to the new Everett Alvarez High in Salinas today. Then they'll face cross-town rival Carmel (1-4) at home on Tuesday in what should shape up as another RLS victory.

RLS nabbed a three-set win against Alisal — 15-2, 15-8, 15-7 — last Thursday, improving its MTAL record to 3-3. Junior Abby Gillfillan and sophomore Anne Turner led the Pirates on offense. Turner provided the bulk of the Stevenson success in serving.

■ SWIMMING & DIVING

Stevenson's second meet of the season comes today at home against Carmel. Swimmers will hit the pool by 4 p.m.

The Pirates opened their season with a meet against host Notre Dame, always tough competition, and suffered a close loss to the Spirits — 99-86.

Senior Breen Murphy was the only Stevenson double-winner; her firsts came in the 500 freestyle and the 100 butterfly.

Adding to the RLS win list were senior Brooke Gaw in the 200 IM and sophomore Desiree Evans-Claasen in the 100 free.

Senior Tamsen Fricke topped out the diving portion of the meet with a 176.55 first-place score.

team in 1994 — gained 80 yards on nine carries.

"He was a big key to get back," said Kelly, who coached that frosh-soph team a year ago.

Another welcome sight for Padre fans was the return of starting quarterback Golden Anderson, who suffered a knee injury in the season opener against Harbor. Anderson, fighting the layoff, was 15 of 35 with three interceptions.

"We just need to execute better," Kelly said of his offense. "It comes down to execution and we have the ability to do that."

Better late than never

The Padres had to wait until the final minute of Friday's game to register their lone score. They were down 27-0 when Colter Bissell went in from one yard out with 1:20 remaining to prevent the shutout.

Kelly observed the big differences in the game were field position and turnovers. King City's longest scoring drive, Kelly noted, was 55 yards. In addition, the opportunistic Mustangs converted three of the Padres' four turnovers into touchdowns.

Carmel's 1-3 start comes as no surprise to Kelly, who said before the season started that the Padres, with no fewer than 17 juniors starting on offense and defense, were "going to make some mistakes and may take our lumps."

But on Friday night, Kelly and Co. meet an Alisal team that can identify with the Padres' plight. Barring a tie, one team will notch a much-needed league victory.

THE SIMPSON VERDICT: What they're saying

ON TUESDAY morning, for a short but tense time, most work stopped in Carmel and environs as people awaited the O.J. Simpson trial verdict over national television. Then the buzz flashed and spread in every direction: Not guilty!

Here's a close look at a wide range of reactions to that verdict:

We must accept the decision. If people will not let go of the "race card," then we will create more injustice and exacerbate racist attitudes. O.J., his kids, the Browns and the Goldmans all need guidance, counseling, understanding and love to help them get on with the rest of their lives.

— Jim Tunney, motivational speaker, close friend of O.J. Simpson and former National Football League referee

I expected it, but I was still stunned. Even though I have been used to the deadening of empathy through the media and the sensationalizing of other people's pain as entertainment, and even though I realize the judicial system we now have is nothing more than a regression to the most primitive form of trial combat, I still thought that empathy and sanity would prevail.

Riane Eisler

The hidden, unarticulated sentiment that must have informed this decision was: Even though he killed them, she had it coming. I hope it can lead to reform and necessary social action for a change.

— Riane Eisler, attorney, cultural historian and author

People should chill out and not allow themselves to be split over the O.J. case. Public venting should properly be laid at the doorstep of Los Angeles Police Department and the prosecution. They did not provide the victims or the accused with competent, effective justice administration.

It was a mess. You had a coroner's office that destroyed its most effective weapon against crime. You had a police department walking around with the suspect's blood in violation of the chain of evidence rule. You had the Mark Fuhrman story and the prosecution who knew it and admitted it in closing arguments. And you had a presiding judge who should have recused himself at the very beginning of the trial.

Lance McClair

What the good public needs to do now — focus on curing the situation and give support to the victims' families and to the Simpson children in their new relationship with both the Simpson and Brown families.

— Lance McClair, investments advisor, former mayor of Seaside, former police officer and former criminal justice instructor. He played Simpson in a mock trial staged for the public

He got away with murder, and we look for who to blame. There's enough blame to go around. A lot of people blame Johnnie Cochran for his racial solidarity appeal. But you can't overlook the fact that the LAPD shares a big part of the blame — Mark Fuhrman is everybody's worst nightmare. The district attorney's office made major blunders. They just didn't put on their best case.

— Richard Rosen, Monterey attorney

To the female victims of domestic violence: Please don't let this stop you from coming forward to reach out for help. The resources are there; there is help. Please do not stay hidden.

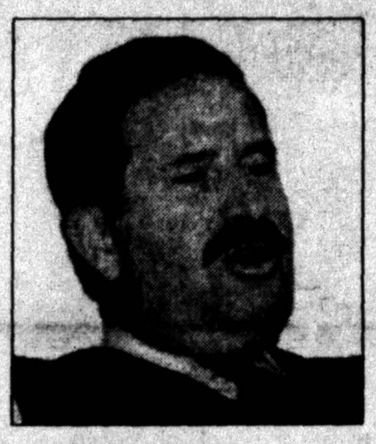
— Carol Ludowise, executive director for Monterey Peninsula YWCA

I really must say that nobody won. But whether we agree with it or not, this is the justice system. If O.J. did commit these crimes, that's something he will have to live with.

— Jackie Craghead, civic activist

I am embarrassed in the way the case was handled by everybody, on both sides. And I am ashamed at what appeared, to me, to be a miscarriage of justice and a misuse of the justice system by both the jury and the attorneys.

— Don Fuselier, Carmel police chief



Don Fuselier

I think what we're seeing is a legal system, now, that allows anyone to escape responsibility for his or her wrongdoing simply by claiming the status of victim. O.J. was characterized as a victim of racism from the LAPD. In my opinion, it seemed like Mark Fuhrman was on trial for racism. He was found guilty, so he must have planted evidence. That leads to reasonable doubt.

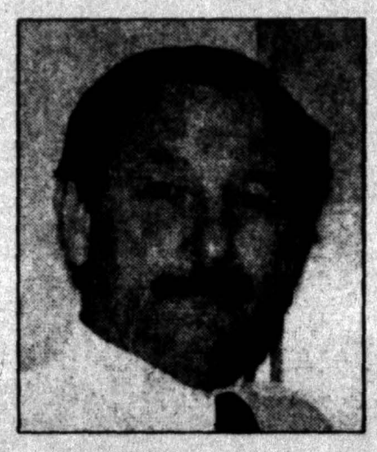
— Jon Wilson, pastor of Carmel Presbyterian Church

I'm reflecting on the grief of the families. This verdict really is a lack of resolution for them. The legal process is one way to resolve their grief, but it's not going to happen for them. It doesn't happen for a lot of families.

— Kathleen Dale, marriage, family and child counselor

I was mildly surprised. In this day and age, nothing surprises me any more — nothing.

— Dennis Lehnen, KSBW-TV sportscaster



Pete Poitras

When the jurors came back in four hours, that indicated they had disregarded a tremendous amount of evidence presented during the nine-month trial. It seems to me they voted with their hearts rather than their minds.

— Pete Poitras, Carmel police dectective and sergeant

Our system is based upon the idea that we would rather have 10 guilty people go free than put one innocent person behind bars. In this case, they either didn't find guilt without a reasonable doubt, or they were penalizing LA law enforcement. I don't know which it is right now, but we may find out soon enough.

— Don Freeman, city attorney for Carmel and Seaside

I was expecting a guilty verdict. I would have been a little bit depressed, no matter which way the verdict went. Both sides had the opportunity to be losers. Now that he has been freed, I fear that he did in fact do it. Had he been convicted, I would have feared that he hadn't been guilty at all.

— John Davi, student body president at Robert Louis Stevenson

I don't know what to say. The tragedy continues. I believe in the jury system, and whatever they decided works for me. They know more about it than I do.

The verdict was a surprise. I thought they would find him guilty, based on the evidence that was presented. I really think it turned out not to be a trial of O.J. Simpson, but a trial of the racism displayed by LAPD.

— Alan Perlmutter, owner of Big Sur River Inn and longtime Buffalo Bills fan

I trust the jury system. But I personally felt that there seemed to be sufficient evidence to convict him. On the other hand, I didn't see all of the proceedings, so I can't second-guess the jury.

— Sue Stryker, chief investigator at the Monterey County district attorney's office

Sue Stryker

I hope the message does not go out that it's OK to beat women and get away with it. There were at least two times when the consequences should have been stiffer than they were. We who work in domestic violence know that unless there's intervention or severe consequences for that behavior, it ends in homicide or suicide. That's a given.

— Barbara Davies, program coordinator for Monterey Peninsula YWCA Women's Center

Great days at CHS

Dear Editor

Thank you for the great remembrance article about the 1955 Carmel High School varsity football team (Pine Cone, Sept. 7).

My oldest brother, Bob Wise, was on that team, and if you don't mind I'd like to toot his horn.

His strength was as a defensive end. On one occasion he was selected by the San Francisco Chronicle as its defensive player of the week — quite an honor bestowed to a player from such a small school from the Central Coast!

That group of athletes, also league champions in basketball, were heroes to us pre-teens growing up in Carmel. Sure, those were more innocent days, but undeniably those were great days in the annals of CHS sports.

There are many more great teams with great stories to be told: please continue. I'm confident that those who read The Pine Cone would be captivated to learn of the players and coaches of the teams of the past.

Jarring wake-up call

Dear Editor:

Sometimes it takes an abrupt wake-up call to make you realize that service often taken for granted is so vital and essential.

The service: our local, in-town Carmel Fire Department and the Carmel Regional Fire Ambulance.

The wake-up call: every wife's worst fear — my husband unconscious on the bedroom floor at 5 a.m.

Even though it seemed like an eternity, four members of the the fire department and two paramedics arrived at our house in LESS than three minutes. Their efficiency, expertise and kindness were comforting during this surreal nightmare.

We residents of Carmel are extremely fortunate to have a local fire department within minutes of our homes, as we are to have an in-town ambulance equipped with paramedics.

The county has voted to award ambulance service to a provider which may not have an ambulance stationed in Carmel. And, the city has hired a consultant to study the fire department with one possible outcome being consolidation with another district.

Every one of us should get involved and work to ensure that our residents retain the level of fire and ambulance service we now have. Any reduction in response time or in staffing ambulances with emergency medical technicians rather than paramedics is unacceptable — even if retaining our current system costs more.

Human life and safety cannot be reduced to a BOTTOM LINE budget decision.

A little Carmel nostalgia

Dear Editor:

For a 16-year old student at Carmel High School, my first "job" as a delivery boy with Nielsen Bros. grocery store was an experience and an education.

Your Sept. 14 article was interesting. I'm sorry more wasn't written about the Dolores Street years when you phoned Mayfair 4-6441 to place your order.

Like so many of Carmel's treasures, Nielsen Bros. has much to offer. How many readers of remember Walter, Harold, Alta, Ruddy, Gene, Kermin and Mel Snyder in the meat department? Do you remember Carol, who went on to be a successful opera singer?

When I quit, so I could join the Carmel High track team, Walter asked me to show a new member of the staff my delivery route. So to Merv Sutton I passed off the key to a beat-up '53 Chevrolet panel truck that never failed when it was time to make those deliveries.

For Harold and Walter it was important that each customer was greeted and treated with respect. They never allowed their product to be less than the finest quality! This I witnessed when deliveries were made.

To Nancy and Merv — a special thanks for maintaining the high quality standards!

Get-tough policy

Dear Editor:

I find it painfully unpleasant to read about the furor by some Carmel Unified School District parents over Annette Yee Steck's decision to send her youngster to a private school.

What a heck of a way to break in our new superintendent and high school principal.

Are the parents satisfied with the education provided for their children? Have they expressed their sentiments on how to improve the scholastic standings of the students?

They should focus on how to motivate students to excel in those basic subjects that will better prepare them for college, or for a meaningful job.

The students should be inspired to achieve the highest capabilities with love and a pat on the back with daily words of encouragement. You maybe amazed at how well they will accept the challenges. Unity among parents, teachers and the school would signal that much is expected of them.

Their self-esteem would reach a peak and prepare them for the more complex issues they will face as adults.

Be grateful that a senior citizen like me is not on the board. Otherwise, those students who, after being warned, still insist on smoking on or off campus would be expelled after their first infraction. The mere presence of any drug or liquor in the student's possession would call for a punishment that would fit the crime.

It might just turn around the attitudes of those who cannot readily accept discipline. Our property taxes pay for the faculty to teach students those subjects that will better prepare them to be productive citizens and not be a burden on society.

I might suggest that parents reflect on what they expect from their children and then let the principal, Mr. Eric Paulson, know so that they can unify their message to the students.

Mr. Paulson has certainly expressed that he loves the "kids" and wants to do what's best for them.

Carmel Valley's Heather Pease makes bid for '96 Olympic team

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE 1996 Summer Olympics Games are more than nine months away, but there is one local woman who is hoping to make enough of a splash next week that she'll be Atlanta-bound come July.

But not too much of a splash, of course, because Heather Pease, who hails from Carmel Valley, will be trying to gain a spot on the 10-member United States' synchronized swimming team. The trials begin Monday in Indianapolis, Ind. The 20-year old is a student at St. Mary's College in Moraga and a member of the Aquanuts swim team in Walnut Creek.

Heather's father, Doug, a Carmel Valley resident, told The Pine Cone this week that he's hopeful locals will let his daughter know of their support.

Pease said well-wishers may send "cards of encouragement" to Heather in care of the Indianapolis Marriott, 7202 East 21st St., Indianapolis, Ind., 46219.

The Indianapolis trials will run for one week, ending Monday, Oct. 16.

The boys' next match comes today at North Salinas High. The current Pirate record is 2-8.

They participated in the Watsonville Invitational over the weekend, exiting the four-match series with a commendable 2-2 record.

On Saturday, after splitting Friday's two games, RLS toppled Cardinal Newman, 10-9, then dropped their last game to Salinas, 10-7.

In the two games, Carter Grant led the team with a total of six goals. Also fueling the offense were Matt Harris (four), Charles Hunter (three) and Tommy Gerken (one each contest).

Festival will honor Una Jeffers, Margaret Wentworth Owings

■ Speakers, events recognize contributions made by the two remarkable women to the environment and culture of the Monterey Peninsula.

By BETH PENNEY

TWO EXTRAORDINARY local women are being honored at this year's Robinson Jeffers Festival, scheduled for Friday through Sunday.

Saturday's George White Memorial Seminars, scheduled at Carpenter Hall in Carmel at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m., will focus on Jeffers' wife Una, who died of cancer in 1950, and her own life and letters.

The annual Jeffers Banquet and Gala that evening, which will be held at the Carmel Woman's Club, honors Big Sur resident and environmentalist Margaret Wentworth Owings for her many contributions to the preservation of the area Jeffers made immortal in his poetry.

A remarkable life

Una Call Kuster married "Robin" Jeffers in 1912 in Seattle. The two met in a German class at UCLA, when Una was married to Ted Kuster. It soon became obvious that Una and Robin were meant for each other, and there was an amicable divorce from Kuster, who later also moved to Carmel, with his new wife, and remained friends with the Jefferses.

Una, who held a master's degree in liberal arts at a time when most women did not even attend college, was a race car driver and a musician as well as an essayist and a reviewer. This literary aspect of her life, as well as her personality and her fierce dedication to family and friends, will be the focus of Saturday's seminar.

Speakers will also touch on her influence on Jeffers' poetry. Jeffers widely acknowledged that influence, and he produced only one thin volume of poetry after her death, although he outlived her by

By IVY WESTON

FOR LINDA Frye, volunteering to further AIDS education has become a class-action task.

The Monterey High School history teacher and senior class adviser took her personal experience volunteering with the Monterey County AIDS Project (MCAP) to Monterey High last year, getting senior class students to adopt MCAP as a community service project.

This year, she's gearing them up for MCAP's AIDS Walk Monterey Bay, slated for Oct. 14 in two locations: Monterey High and San Lorenzo Park in Santa Cruz.

Walkers ask people to sponsor them by pledging a tax-deductible contribution to MCAP. Last year the walk garnered $90,000, and Bill Lutz, AIDS Walk Monterey Bay co-chair, said organizers are "hoping to break $100,000 this year."

The money is distributed to nine local agencies directly involved in AIDS education and outreach programs.

Frye believes getting high school students involved in the AIDS Walk is of the utmost importance because ignorance when it comes to AIDS can be deadly.

"The most important thing to realize is how close to home this disease is," Frye said. "High school kids think they are invincible."

Frye herself didn't realize how close to home AIDS was for her until her cousin died of the disease.

"When someone close to you dies, it becomes very meaningful. Then I had a friend who died, and at that point it became closer and closer to home."

But it wasn't until her teenage daughter began volunteering with MCAP that Frye became involved.

"If the daughter does it, Mom's got to do it too," she laughed.

Senior class adviser Linda Frye (second from left) has taken advantage of her close relationships with students to get them to volunteer with the Monterey County AIDS Project.

Enter students

Frye, who in 1994 received MCAP's Community Action Award, realized she could do only so much single-handedly, and decided to use her role on campus to get students involved. So last year at Christmas time, she posted a sign-up sheet for a Christmas volunteer project for MCAP, in which the students would bake cookies, don elf costumes and throw a party for AIDS patients. She was surprised by how many students were willing to donate their time.

"We had so many kids sign up for the Christmas project, I cried," she said. "To see that much enthusiasm was heartwarming. They were truly doing it out of community spirit."

Frye noted that Monterey High, unlike Carmel High School, has no community service requirement for graduation, and that most of these students had had no contact with AIDS patients and very little AIDS education previous to the Christmas project.

"I had one student come up to me before the

Reflections

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

Take a vacation every day

"BRING IN the bootled lightning, a clean tumbler, and a corkscrew."

Charles Dickens said that. It had to be metaphorical.

I know a delightful woman in her mid-70s who carries a corkscrew in her purse. "You never know when you'll run inno a good bootle of wine," she says.

"A good bootle of wine" . . . Perhaps a good bootle of wine is more than a great Chardonnay or a perfect Merlot. Maybe it's the wine of discovery or adventure, or maybe it's the rare wine of being aware of the beauty that surrounds us.

Maybe we should carry a corkscrew with us all the time to be able to open the pleasures that are ours every day: that metaphorical corkscrew that opens the heady wine of living.

Most of us don't have money to burn, and the chances of winning a lottery or having The Prize Patrol roll up to our doorsteps are about as remote as a snow storm in the Sahara desert. But we Carmelites have a wine cellar that is rich beyond compare . . . we can drink the wine of living every day! And we should.

Vacation at home

Many of us who live here take our good fortune for granted, I'm afraid. The rest of the world, it seems, comes here to vacation. This is our home and we should take advantage of our unique position on this planet.

Every day huge magenta and puce colored buses block half of Junipero Street behind the Plaza and disgorge hordes of people who have traveled hundreds, perhaps thousands of miles to see, and smell, and taste a bit of our magic village.

Let's change that. Let's take a vacation every day! We deserve it! We need it! Not next week, or next month; not the kind of vacation we plan on once or twice a year, but one we can take today.

All of us in the grip of routine and schedule look forward to some future letup and overlook the fact that short daily intervals can hold all the essentials of a holiday: change of scene, change of pace, change of people, and change of habit.

Let's say our vacation should be one of active pleasure. Our lunch hour probably furnishes the opportunity. For many of us lunch is just another of the day's routine happenings and we spend that precious hour in the same place, with the same people, and perhaps eating the same kind of food.

A few examples

Years ago I knew a man, a building inspector for the City of Carmel, who lunched lightly every day, grabbed a golf club and a couple of balls from the back of his car and went to the beach to practice his sand trap shots. On other days he would go to one of our grassy parks and practice short chip-shots.

He could have spent his lunch hour complaining to co-workers that he never had time to improve his short game. Instead he took a vacation every day, doing something he loved, and became an excellent golfer, at least at the short game.

Maybe golf isn't your thing — then take a gourmet vacation. The variety of restaurants here is overwhelming. New taste delights. New faces. New friends.

Let's not choose places frequented by the people we work with. We'll be back with them soon enough. Instead let's step into another world. A world of gastronomic exploration for a bowl of soup and a salad. Cheap enough, but an adventure . . . a mini-vacation.

Day after day, many of us permit our souls to wither simply by our habit of getting no good from the moments we could call our own.

I know a young man in the construction business who goes hunting with his camera every day. The camera is constantly beside him in his pickup truck. Shots of surfers, rear view shots of overly plump bargain hunters, traffic maids caught on film patiently explaining to irate tourists why they got a ticket for parking three hours in a 20 minute zone. He is recording fascinating dramas of life. He takes a vacation every day!

> Anything we do that summons our inner selves from the dull recesses of clock-ruled hours gives us the vacation we need. Routine duties deaden us.

Anything we do that summons our inner selves from the dull recesses of clock-ruled hours gives us the vacation we need. Routine duties deaden us.

Carmel offers us a thousand ways to enrich our life experiences every day. Explore those hidden paths that wind between buildings and shops and lead to the next street. Wander through the garden shops, hidden from the main paths, that summon us with the subtle sounds of wind chimes and fountains.

The important element is change. Maybe the change we need for our vacation each day is as simple as a time for relaxation. Mastering the techniques of relaxation will lead to those quiet reservoirs from which we can draw strength and stand against the strain and stress and clatter of the world around us.

We can step out of our world of problems, and loud music, and bills, and threatening letters from the IRS into an enchanted world of drifting, where those things are not known.

In such magical moments we catch the glint and gleam of a golden world . . . we become aware of the sound of the sea on our white beaches, the soft rustle of a tree as a breeze disturbs the symmetry of leaves.

Only in moments of relaxation will the world of awareness be ours. It is a world of unmatched powers that can refresh a weary spirit and restore the quiet ways of life . . . a place that can give us the vacation we need every day.

Christmas party and say 'Ms. Frye, are there going to be people with AIDS there?' and I said 'Yeah' and the student was like, 'Oh.' It was a reality shock."

Frye then brought people with AIDS into the classrooms to speak with students about the disease, followed by a question and answer session, in order to "bust the myth that it's a gay disease."

This is an educational experience in itself and one that she's continuing to provide this year: "Talk about first-hand, this is it. You can't get any closer than first-hand."

Involving all classes

Frye has gone beyond the senior class in recruiting students to participate in the AIDS Walk. She's already put information about the event into the freshman, sophomore and junior class advisers' mailboxes.

She plans to follow up this week in hopes that faculty and students will walk or get someone to walk in their place, as SATs and a Monterey High football game are slated for the same day.

Frye also hopes that teachers will provide incentives to their classes in exchange for walking — perhaps no homework for two nights for the class with the most students signed up to walk, extra credit or a pizza party.

A New York City native who holds social studies, learning handicap and resource specialist credentials, Frye runs a Tuesday night tutorial program in addition to teaching freshman and junior-level history courses.

She also donates her time to Block M, a club of varsity-lettered athletes, of whom she said, "Those that aren't playing football or taking their SATs will be walking with me.

"I'm going to walk myself and then I'm going to drive over to the MHS football game. So Saturday is my day to fulfill my 'Monterey Pride,'" she said.

Frye also is working on getting the Monterey High leadership class, composed of Associated Student Body officers and led by Activities Director Dan Albert, involved in the AIDS Walk.

Although she's extremely busy, Frye knows her hard work is paying off.

"I'm glad that the barriers are breaking down and the students are feeling more vulnerable, perhaps."

Kuumbwa sets 20th anniversary party Friday

IT'S TIME for major congratulations. Kuumbwa Jazz Center of Santa Cruz clicks into high gear Friday night with its 20th anniversary doings — and you're invited.

The specific event and longevity factor both deserve attention. Just as regional non-profits sent fresh air throughout the American theater scene, Kuumbwa pioneered the presentation of top-flight jazz from a community base.

Today's smoke-free venue offers top national and regional players, good food, educational programs and a welcome mat telling young folks they always can take part in the action.

Have you ever seen a child-on-parental-lap being quite happily transported by the piano magic of a Susan Muscarella or Benny Green? Wonderful. And, yes, it happens at Kuumbwa regularly.

So then. At 7 p.m. Friday, general manager Tim Jackson and board members will be on hand with greetings as a Kuumbwa mixed media retrospective exhibit opens in the Octagon Museum of McPherson Center for Art and History (705 Front St. — right downtown).

The public reception also is a benefit. Tickets cost $30 apiece and may be reserved via 427-2227. Offered: some tasty vittles, varied beverages, live jazz by Smith Dobson and friends.

Attendees will see scores of bandstand and mood shots taken at Kuumbwa over the years by such excellent jazz photographers as localite Will Wallace. There'll be an audio-visual display by Todd Pinsky — vintage footage of jazz masters on the job there.

Drum and jazz history nuts will enjoy seeing the set used by legendary New Orleans pro Baby Dodds. This exact replica has been loaned to Kuumbwa for the show by a collector.

The exhibit's regular run — this Saturday through Nov. 4. Hours at McPherson Center are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily.

Brilliant pianist and composer Jon Jang's octet will claim the Monday night spotlight at Kuumbwa with the poet Genny Lim. It'll be the concert premiere of Jon's Island: The Immigrant Suite Number One.

Starts at 8. Either $13 advance (Cymbaline Records) or $15 at the door.

Jazz Tides

Flip, too

To find her equal as an interpreter of lyrics, one must think of older jazz vocalists like Irene Kral and Irene's stylish sister-in-law: Jackie Cain. I mean Madeline Eastman, who'll do sets Saturday night at that Jazz Store beside KRML Radio in The Crossroads.

Madeline Eastman

The gig starts at 7:30. Call 624-6432 for reservations. Door charge includes a wine tasting (by Monterey County's Jekel Vineyards).

Inspired by Billie Holiday, Madeline cites Miles Davis and Mark Murphy as strong influences. She's hip, soft, witty, torn up — whatever the words require. From Peggy Lee minimalism to Brazilian scat, this woman is one fascinating actress.

Longtime jazz warrior Flip Nunes will be at the piano. He pours forth ideas the way other folks pour coffee.

Quite a combination.

Maria on Maria

When she was here for the 38th annual Monterey Jazz Festival, New York composer Maria Schneider — also the conductor of her own orchestra — answered many questions about herself during an afternoon clinic. The room was packed with general jazz buffs as well as other writers and arrangers. Some quotes worth preserving:

— "I love to tell stories and engage people. I love to grab them and take them on the journey."

— "Writing is the most painful thing I know. I do it because I have to. I guess I'm a composer, because it's so awful and I still do it."

— "I put fragments on a big piece of score paper. Then I work out various relationships. It's a process of back and forth: big picture, little picture."

— "There's a magical attraction between ideas. You must trust that if you work with them, they'll fall together."

— "I got little things from Gil Evans (employer) and Bob Brookmeyer (instructor). I didn't try to take big things from them."

■ IN APPRECIATION: OLGA IVINSKAYA

Boris Pasternak's Lara dies after life of much suffering and faithfulness

By JOHN DETRO

CAN IT be true? Yes. Lara's dead — the radiant lover of a Russian gentleman named Dr. Zhivago.

If you insist that this wondrous literary creation cannot expire, know that we're talking about the real, suffering woman who was author Boris Pasternak's model for the lovely Lara.

Olga Ivinskaya, Pasternak's mistress for decades, took her last breath earlier this month in Moscow. She was 83 years old.

When the great writer died, the literate world mourned at some length. Let us pause and honor the woman whose pain may have been deeper — because it never received the payback of global respect.

Junior editor

They met when Olga was a young junior editor at the literary journal Novy Mir. He was 56 and refused to leave his wife. Ivinskaya and Pasternak became lifelong lovers. In his final years, the writer (who died in 1960) spent the nights with his spouse and his days with Olga in a nearby dacha.

How do we know that the author got his Lara from seeing Ivinskaya smile and dance and walk about? Memoirs and letters by Pasternak state the truth clearly.

He and other literary lights were tormented by Stalin's security police in the late 1940s. Olga first was imprisoned (1949) so that the infamous Beria, himself, could question her about Pasternak.

She endured solitary confinement, bright lights in her face, sleep deprivation. Other writers abandoned works to protect their families, but Pasternak would not halt his Zhivago project.

Ivanskaya was let go after four years in the prison camp system (Gulag). Though Pasternak had spoken of ending the relationship, they were reunited. When he won the Nobel Prize (1958), Soviet officials hounded him without mercy — and Olga remained by his side.

After he died, the KGB took some of his papers from her house. Olga was sentenced to a second term in the camps. Both were "rehabilitated" in 1988, when the big book about Lara and Zhivago finally was published in the Soviet Union.

Olga's memoirs of her time with the author have been called superficial by some critics. Others credit her with providing insights that could not have come from any other quarter.

"Ivinskaya was the only great love of Pasternak's last years," biographer Ronald Hingley has said. "She helped to inspire him — and her comments on his work are of enormous value."

So here was a woman whose love stood up under the most brutal conditions her enemies could contrive. At her death, she still was fighting to reclaim the stolen Pasternak papers from state literary archives.

Olga.

Olga Ivinskaya.

A moment of silence, if you will.

Pitt, Freeman can't save gimmick-ridden 'Seven'

By CRAIG ARNOTT
Pine Cone Film Critic

Morgan Freeman's performance in 'Seven' is better than the movie itself.

THOUGH THE material in Seven could have been presented in several creative ways, director David Fincher opted to parade the gimmicks:

Forceful rain beating down on the actors' studiously concerned faces, a jagged, atonal score, settings which are always drab, smoky and poorly lit.

Some of these technical mainstays have long ceased to evoke a soulful, introspective mood and instead feel much like an old suit of clothes — something which may fit but is out of style.

Review

Last year's Pulp Fiction, while a potent bit of filmmaking, has had the dubious legacy of allowing current filmmakers to revel in certain exaggerated genre crutches.

Seven seems to be a product of this trend, and the result is a film that is dull and trite.

The film's star gimmick is its premise: an educated serial killer is snuffing his victims according to the well-known Seven Deadly Sins: Sloth, Wrath, Gluttony, Dopey, Sneezy, etc.

SEVEN
State Cinemas,
417 Alvarado, Monterey
Starring: Brad Pitt, Morgan Freeman,
Gwyneth Paltrow
Director: David Fincher
Rating: ★★

For example, "John Doe" illustrates his logic by forcefeeding a fat man spaghetti sauce until his stomach ruptures (this would be Gluttony); Greed's casualty is, poetically, a high-priced attorney and Lust's is a prostitute (another crime drama standard).

Generation gap

Detectives Somerset and Mills (Morgan Freeman and Brad Pitt) are assigned to the case and prove near opposites, separated by serious differences in age, politics and wardrobe.

Sparring at their desks, in bars and in diners, they pause to throw about world-weary cynical statements — "I don't think I can live in a place where apathy is embraced as a virtue" — which sound cribbed from a high school ethics essay but are supposed to have the audience murmuring in agreement.

Brad Pitt

The sermonizing is sometimes interrupted by action, which comes in short, nasty spurts, and is filmed with jerky hand-held cameras and usually occurs in some sort mist or downpour.

Ultimately, the clearest information Seven conveys regarding detectives is how much of their lives revolve around arguing, thumb twiddling and pointless suppositions.

Trying to prevent Doe from striking again, Somerset and Mills let their bickering ebb and doggedly follow the leads. At one point, in a cruel twist, they're forced to read excerpts from Dante and Chaucer to understand all of Doe's planted hints and references.

The film's climax manages to neatly wrap up the perverted ethical preoccupations of Doe into a tidy package. But, after two hours of grungy cat-and-mouse theatrics, it's a stale dessert.

The film's climax manages to neatly wrap up the perverted ethical preoccupations of Doe into a tidy package. But, after two hours of grungy cat-and-mouse theatrics, it's a stale dessert.

Suprise needed

Though it contains the obligatory disgusting images of defiled corpses and paints Doe as brilliantly manipulative, Seven lacks what made good psychopath films like The Silence of the Lambs (1991) so effective: surprise. Doe might massacre with wit and panache, but there is little doubt that he will run through all seven gruesome killings before the police can snare him.

Writer Andrew Kevin Walker's admirable ear for dialogue is undercut by his lackadaisical approach to momentum and suspense. As skillful performers as Freeman and Pitt are, they can't puncture the dull rhetoric of Walker's screenplay.

Only Gwyneth Paltrow, who plays Pitt's goodhearted and therefore doomed wife, transcends the film's traditional notion of character. Her subtle yet highly expressive behavior is the movie's brightest light, deepening the understanding of her feelings of concern and neglect.

The truth about Seven is revealed before the end credits roll.

It succumbs to the eighth deadly sin: mediocrity.

Hawthorne Gallery grand opening slated in Big Sur

THE GRAND opening of Big Sur's Hawthorne Gallery will occur from 6 to 10 p.m. Friday at 48485 Highway 1 in Big Sur.

Owner Gregory Hawthorne arrived on the Big Sur coast 13 years ago with the dream of building a career as an artist there. He set up a studio on a ridge-top piece of land with beautiful coastal views. The property was zoned for commercial use, and Gregory hoped to one day establish an art gallery on the site. He has now seen this idea become a reality.

Hawthorne is known locally to some as the artist who designed furniture and other artwork for the Post Ranch Inn in Big Sur. He collaborated with Post Ranch Inn architect Mickey Muennig to design the Hawthorne Gallery.

Featured at the gallery are the works of Gregory Hawthorne, as well as his brother Chris, sister Lisa Hawthorne, Lisa's husband Steve Kuntz and Albert Paley.

Chris Hawthorne is a widely known glass blower, Lisa is a jeweler, Kuntz a sculptor and Paley a metal sculptor whose work has been exhibited at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, and the Smithsonian's National Museum of American Art.

More information: 667-3200.

Deanna Forbes' work hangs at Cherry

"HOLDING STILL," an exhibit of new paintings by Deanna Forbes, opens with a reception for the artist from 5 to 7 p.m. Saturday at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, located at Fourth and Guadalupe in Carmel.

Working in the middle ground between representation and abstraction, Forbes uses the process of creating her large paintings as a tool for exploring psychological concerns. Employing oil on canvas, Forbes' recent paintings are of vessels and pots.

Native Californian Forbes was born in San Rafael and has been painting for 35 years. She attended the University of California at Berkeley before moving on to the San Francisco Art Institute, where she studied with Richard Diebenkorn, Elmer Bischoff and James Weeks.

Forbes' work has been exhibited at the Oakland Museum of Art, the San Jose Museum of Art and the Crocker Art Gallery in Sacramento, to name a few.

The exhibit continues through Oct. 27. More information: 624-7491.

three spirits presents new show, sets music party

EXHIBITING ARTISTS Mac Talley and Philipp Branum will be honored with a reception from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday at three spirits warehouse, located at 361 Orange Street in Sand City.

Talley's paintings have been featured in group shows at The League, The Victor D'Amico Institute of Art on Long Island, and were exhibited at the WOMAD (World of Music, Art and Dance) Festival in Saratoga, N.Y.

He feels his work reflects reality through a fun-house mirror, and allows dream imagery to coexist with the mundane.

Branum is primarily an absract expressionist who blends new perceptions with old and tried methods. He holds a bachelor's degree in art from UC Santa Cruz.

On Saturday the warehouse hosts its eighth "Sand Jam," from 8 p.m. to midnight, featuring Talley's band Jupiter Vox and another local alternative rock band, Vera Lane. Special guests to appear with Jupiter Vox will be John "Dream" Harris on keyboards and Michael Cabaluna (of the Mudskippers) on guitar.

Film projections by Harris and go-go dancers will accompany the music in a non-smoking, alcohol-free environment.

There's a $5 cover for the Sand Jam (portions of the proceeds will help fund the three spirits nonprofit art center, slated to open in January).

Vera Lane

The exhibition remains on view through Nov. 3. More information: 393-ARTS.

Weston Gallery hosts event for Michael Kenna

Kenna will be signing copies of his eighth and most recent publication entitled Michael Kenna: A Twenty Year Retrospective.

The photographer's atmospheric landscapes range in subject matter from views of European bridges to industrial scenes. Devoid of people, the photos convey a sense of mystery and serenity.

Kenna's works remain at the gallery through Oct. 30. More information: 624-4453.

Taste Buds

KATY'S
'The toast of the town'

WHEN RECOMMENDING a place to have breakfast in Carmel, the name of one restaurant keeps popping up.

Katy's Place, located in the heart of Carmel-by-the-Sea, has been serving the most extensive breakfast menu in the village for 12 years. Nobody leaves hungry.

The success of Katy's Place is due largely to the tireless efforts of Master Chef Ari Georgsson, a graduate of the Culinary Academy of Iceland.

Georgsson, who has owned and managed Katy's Place for the past five years, also is widely renowned as the former executive chef of the Covey Restaurant at Quail Lodge, where he worked for many years.

What makes Katy's stand apart from its competitors?

"For one thing, it's what you get for the money," Georgsson said. "It's the humongous portions – all the homemade food we put on your plate.

"When you leave, you're satisfied," Georgsson added. "That's the biggest difference."

Consider the nine different variations of eggs Benedict available at Katy's, each including three ranch eggs poached to order, perched atop an English muffin and served with a rich homemade hollandaise sauce and seasoned country potatoes. Sauteed vegetables, crab, shrimp, salmon and turkey are among the tempting possibilities.

Whether seeking a great omelette or eggs any style, Katy's Place has exactly what you're craving at a price you can live with. All breakfasts at Katy's are priced at less than $10.

Served with country potatoes and choice of toast and jam, you can enjoy your morning eggs with hickory smoked, thick-sliced bacon, Italian sausage, traditional pork sausage, cured ham steak, New York steak, lox, trout, calamari, even smoked North Atlantic herring.

And there are still more choices: cheese-filled blintzes covered with fresh berries and sour cream; homemade corned beef hash and eggs; huevos rancheros; fresh fruit waffles, French toast and six varieties of buttermilk pancakes.

Breakfast all day

While breakfast at Katy's is served all day, the lunch menu has a lot to offer hungry patrons as well.

There are award-winning hamburgers and sandwiches, served with your choice of country potatoes, mixed greens or potato salad.

Lunch specials include Katy's popular calamari jack burger, a calamari filet lightly breaded and grilled with Monterey Jack cheese.

There also are two different chicken breast sandwiches, a shrimp quesadilla, and the New Yorker – a bagel topped with smoked salmon, cream cheese, capers and onions.

Or, for something light, try one of Katy's salads. Choose between a shrimp salad, chef salad, tuna or chicken salad, or fresh fruit salad with yogurt.

While Georgsson says salespersons come to his restaurant every week trying to sell him cheaper foods that will save him money, he remains stubborn in his commitment to quality.

"I tell them, 'I don't want anything cheap, I want the best,'" Georgsson said. "When it comes right down to it, you're really not saving much by buying anything cheap.

"The quality comes through," he added. "People appreciate that."

During warm weather, patrons can be seen dining and conversing beneath the redwood trees on Katy's outdoor patio, which has become quite popular, according to Georgsson.

Katy's Place is located on Mission between 5th and 6th avenues in downtown Carmel and is open daily from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Additional information can be obtained by calling 624-0199.

The outdoor patio at Katy's Place has become a popular spot to enjoy a great breakfast and good conversation.

More than Jeffers, festival this year honors women, too

12 years.

At 10 a.m. on Saturday, former Tor House trustee Richard Tevis of Carmel will speak on "Family Recollections of Una Jeffers."

Tevis said that "the Jeffers were friends of my family" in early Carmel, and remembers that Una was "the glue that held the family together."

Also speaking in the 10 a.m. time slot is James Karman, author of Robinson Jeffers: Poet of California, who will address "Robinson Jeffers' Mystic Bride."

At 2 p.m. Saturday, Maeve Greenan Hardy, whose mother, Edith, was one of Una's closest friends, will offer personal recollections of Una. Robert Kafka of UCLA will also give a lecture entitled "The Attic Clarity of her Intelligence: Una Jeffers as Essayist and Reviewer."

Margaret Wentworth Owings

Preserving "Jeffers Country"

The Festival's Evening Gala, which starts with a social hour at 6:30 and features ceremonies at 9, will honor artist and conservationist Margaret Wentworth Owings.

Owings has a long list of well-deserved environmental awards and titles to her credit. She has received the United Nations' Environment Program's Gold Medal, the U.S. Department of the Interior's Gold Medal Conservation Service Award, the California Academy of Science's Conservation Award, and the Sierra Club's Distinguished Service Award.

She is also the founder of the Friends of the Sea Otter, the Chair of the California Mountain Lion Preservation Fund, and a member of the board of the National Parks Foundation.

Congressman Sam Farr, who will speak at the ceremonies Saturday night, said of Owings, "I am one of the fortunate Carmel kids who was able to grow up under Margaret Owings' influence, and I have been a disciple of her desire to have people manage resources, not just to use them, so that they will be here for generations to come."

Farr said that "Margaret is a person who has taught sustainable development. You don't just use it all up — we'll have nothing left but waste."

Owings, Farr said, is also a prime example of the idea that environmentalism can also mean economic development. He lauded Owings' founding of the Friends of the Sea Otter.

"She's done more to support the economy of the Monterey Peninsula than anyone," he said, by promoting the sea otter as everything from a logo on mugs and T-shirts to the mascot of the brand-new California State University-Monterey Bay.

Owings herself added simple modesty to her list of accomplishments when asked about this week's recognition. "I'm really astonished that they made it an honor," she said, although she admitted simply, "I've worked a long time on issues of wildlife and trees."

"It's lovely that they've drawn me into the whole Tor House Foundation celebration," she also noted.

Owings has a bittersweet memory of Una Jeffers. She met the Jefferses several times at various events, she explained, but when one of Owings' far-sighted conservation efforts was aimed directly at the Jeffers family, it went sour.

"We thought we were going to help the Jefferses by buying the land [adjacent to Tor House] on the ocean side of Scenic Road," Owings said. "It would have been set aside to stay as it was, without anything encroaching on it." But the family refused Owings' group's offer to buy the land.

Robin was a reluctant public speaker, Owings remembered, but "Una was ill [with cancer] already, and she sent Robin to the Board of Supervisors to protest it for her," she said. "He stood up and said, 'We don't want to sell.'

And, of course, you know what that piece of property looks like now," she concluded, referring to the inevitable development that has hemmed Tor House in from the ocean side.

Other festival activities

The 1995 Festival includes an opening reception Friday, from 4-6 p.m. in the Tor House Garden.

Admission is free with paid advance registration for the seminars or the banquet; otherwise, the cost for the reception is $8.

On Sunday, the Annual Jeffers Poetry Walk, led by John Courtney and Burt Kessenick, leaves from Room 14B at Sunset Cultural Center at 9:15 a.m. Coffee and cakes will be served at 8:30; bring a brown bag lunch and your favorite poems.

Advance reservations for the morning and afternoon seminars on Saturday are $10 per person; single-session admission is $8 at the door. Banquet attendance is by advance reservation only. Seating is limited, and the cost is $60 per person.

More information, reservations or directions may be obtained by calling the Tor House Foundation at 624-1813.

Lox, bagels, knishes: It's Jewish Food Festival time

CONGREGATION BETH Israel's Eighth Annual Jewish Food Festival will take place from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Sunday at the Synagogue, 5716 Carmel Valley Road in Carmel Valley.

Admission will be $3 for adults and $1 for teenagers (13-18) and seniors (65 and over). Children 12 and under will be admitted free.

Attendees may park at Carmel Middle School and take the frequent shuttles to the festival site.

All proceeds from the event benefit Congregation Beth Israel's programs and local charities.

Symphony turns 50 — Cabaret Pops is a hit

THE MONTEREY County Symphony, Saturday evening's Pops Concert at Sherwood Hall in Salinas, in a spellbinding performance, brought us back to the time when the world was at war and young men were being sent overseas to fight.

The Andrews Sisters were pounding the boards with a song — Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree — and Walter Winchell was sending S.O.S. radio signals to Mr. and Mrs. America and all the ships at sea that Herr Hitler is "a dirty rat." Remember?

It was an incredibly nostalgic musical offering.

Stardust singers Pamela Peterson and Kate MacMillan, brought the house down at the Golden Cabaret Pops, Monterey County Symphony's 50th anniversary event Saturday evening in Sherwood Hall, Salinas.

From the moment the Stardust singing sensations— true replicas of the Andrew Sisters — popped out of a huge white birthday cake with a sign reading "50 Yrs," to the final popping of balloons that fell from the ceiling, everyone was enraptured to say the least.

When Stardust performers Joette Waters, Kate MacMillan and Pamela Peterson, in World War II Wacs uniforms, sang Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy, a couple from our table got up and danced a flamboyant lindy-hop.

Most notable was that the music director and conductor, Clark Suttle, his magic baton and orchestra, rendered those '40s songs so authentically, because almost all of them weren't even around then.

During intermission, auctioneer Craig Hemphil auctioned off trips to Paris, Puerto Rico, San Francisco, Arizona as well as Carmel Valley and Big Sur.

What followed was Rachmanianoff's rousing Piano Concerto No. 2, played with gusto by world-renowned pianist Emile Naoumoff of Paris.

Kudos to the numerous Cabaret Pops volunteers, headed by MCS president Carol Lee Owens and her chairperson Mrs. Raymond Simmons. Dolores Gunia's period garments placed on mannequins in the Sherwood Hall Lobby lent credence to the nostalgic musical evening!

The Cabaret Pops this year was sponsored by the J.C. Penney Co. Naumoff was sponsored by Country Home Care. Proceeds from the live auction benefited the Monterey County Symphony.

■ 'We're No. 1!'

The Pacific Grove American Cancer Society Discovery Shop raised $382,700 from September 1994 to August 1995.

Shop Chairman Nancy Starr, at the 11th Annual Recognition Luncheon held last Thursday at Rancho Cañada Golf Club, told the members that their group has ranked No. 1 in sales in the nation for the last six years.

Singers Arna Robins and Leberta Renfro take a break from the adoring crowd Saturday. The women performed for a benefit for the Monterey County Symphony.

The American Cancer Society, headquartered in Washington, D.C., sent them a telegram congratulating them profusely.

The volunteers sell gently-used clothing, furniture and jewelry in the shop located at Davis and Forest in Pacific Grove. Since the shop opened in 1984, more than $2.65 million has been raised for the American Cancer Society, a nationwide voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by prevention, saving lives from cancer and diminishing it through research, and education.

Al and Arline Arrivee of Monterey catch their breath behind Alexandra Morrow and Jerome Jacques of Carmel after kicking up their heels to the Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy.

Among the services for cancer patients: a breast cancer self-help group, prostate support groups, the United Ostomy Association, equipment loans and transportation.

At the luncheon, more than 65 volunteers received certificates of appreciation for long hours of work at the shop. Many have volunteered at the shop for several years. Lucille Toscano was given a 10-year pin for her services.

Next year's Discovery Shop board includes president Nancy Starr, Joyce Scoggins, Jean Berryhill, Barbara Eisiminger, Esther Pierce, Lori Kohn and Jeannie Clausen.

Starr says that donations of clothing, household items, furniture and jewelry are always needed. All you need to do is call or deliver items to the Monterey Unit at 2600 Garden Road, Monterey, or contact Joey Cobley at 372-0866.

■ Bring out the Applause sign

Something happened!

It happened to me, and I hope it will happen to all of you someday if it hasn't already.

I watched 25 hard-working, creative people put together a completely new organization in less than one hour. It was like watching builders build a house on TV when they speed up the film. Just incredible. The founders of Monterey would shout for joy!

At the Beach Club in Pebble Beach last Thursday, the dynamic Morley Brown and her comrade-in-arms Dr. Ron Weitzman joined people like Betty Ghent, Barbara Brooks, Jean Darragh, Fleece Dennis, Flora Chong and 20 others to get all the committees set up and working — committees like membership, fund raising, newsletter and public relations, to name just a few.

The new organization, titled Applause, with a newsletter aptly named Encore, is now a board set up to help the Monterey Opera Association and the Monterey Bay Symphony.

The mission statement will include fund raising activities to build a combination opera house/symphony hall.

Just imagine if they — like Steve Moorer has done with the Pacific Repertory Theatre in drama — become one of the best of classical music companies around. We'll have the renowned Carmel Bach Festival, the Pacific Repertory Theatre and the Monterey Opera and Bay Symphony, all known nationally as well as locally in little old Monterey.

Another Firenze or Venezia! Watch out Italy, we're gonna take it all away from you!

Yes, something happened alright, something quite grand.

Betty Ghent, (standing)), Lee Chamberlin, Jerry Prothro, Artie Early, Morley Brown and Nancy Williams were among those who joined forces to support the area's long musical tradition.

New book targets condo conflict resolution

These wars can be avoided by following the advice of experts

California Trends

By BRADLEY INMAN

THE MARKETING hype of condominium living promises a carefree independent lifestyle without home maintenance headaches, neighborhood nuisances and the chores of owning a single-family home.

But there can be an underbelly to condo bliss and that is the conflicts growing from the homeowners associations.

Responsible for maintaining the common property in a condo development and collecting dues to do so, these volunteer organizations can get out of control, harass wayward members, adopt strait-jacket rules for such things as stereo noise and paint colors and create a resentful environment among homeowners.

Absent any regulatory help and without ongoing educational programs, homeowners associations sometimes resort to litigation to sort out their troubles — tying up property sales and aggravating the conflicts.

Many of the publications designed to help associations discuss arcane legal issues and property management practices but avoid the tougher problems of erratic human behavior, power-hungry volunteers and out-of-control neighbor spats.

Conflict resolution

A new book by Walnut Creek attorney Beth Grimm and Ventura freelance writer Jim R. Lane tries to fill that void with a comprehensive and funny — sometimes corny — look at the human side of condo problems and practical advice on how to resolve them.

"Finding the Key to Your Castle: A Guide to Cooperative Living in Your Condominium, Townhouse or Planned Development Home" teaches both homeowners and the association leaders how to anticipate and avoid small conflicts that can erupt into condo wars. They use real-life examples of homeowner spats to make their point.

Take the resident who puts in a skylight without getting approval from the homeowners association and gets a nasty letter from the association president.

In their chapter on rights and responsibilities, Grimm and Lane guide the homeowner through why the association has an interest in such improvements but also advises how the association can be more sensitive in how it communicates with its members.

Many of the publications designed to help associations discuss arcane legal issues and property management practices but avoid the tougher problems of erratic human behavior, power-hungry volunteers and out-of-control neighbor spats.

Some disputes are unavoidable, according to the two condo experts who together have had more than 30 years experience with homeowners associations.

'Life happens'

"Disputes between the board and homeowners happen because life happens," they write. "People want to be comfortable, happy and have things their way — but in (a homeowners association) people don't get to choose their neighbors and they often live in close proximity to each other, sharing walls and stairways."

In the tug and pull between homeowner and association, Grimm and Lane tend to side with the association, arguing for more responsibility by individual owners. They concede that there are "draconian boards, unreasonable neighbors and (property managers) skimming from the till but these are exceptions among the thousands of good associations."

Self-published by Grimm and Lane, the 200-page book is divided into three major sections: 1) Cooperative Living, 2) The Money Angle and 3) Running The Ranch. Included are chapters on the

MARKET UPDATE

Area real estate scene on rebound

By STEPHEN POOHAR

THE MONTEREY Peninsula real estate market rebounded strongly after July's dismal results. In Carmel, Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach, Monterey and Pacific Grove, as a whole, the market soared 82 percent compared to the level achieved in July of this year, but, as measured by closed sales, was only 2 percent higher than in August 1994.

Furthermore, the level of buying interest and opened escrows appears to have increased in the past several weeks, and mortgage interest rates continue to be favorable to potential buyers. The higher level of buying activity should be reflected in a higher level of increased sales in the months to come.

From August '94, the median price increased by 5 percent in Pacific Grove, 3 percent in Pebble Beach and 2 percent in Monterey. The Carmel median price decreased 2 percent, while Carmel Valley's median price remained virtually unchanged.

(Median prices in the areas indicated are, in most cases, based on a relatively small number of sales, a situation in which only one more sale above or below the previous median price can change the median price significantly.)

Mortgage interest rates have moderated somewhat in recent weeks, and there are indications that lower interest rates may be possible later this year.

Discussions with many realtors, escrow officers and lenders in our area reveal that this market rebound may well lead to increasing sales in the months to come because of attractive home prices and financing options.

reason for various rules and how associations should go about enforcing them; how to ensure there is an adequate budget for unexpected costs such as a new roof; and various ways for resolving disputes without lawsuits.

Targeting absentee owners

Grimm and Lane also advise homeowners how to deal with the sticky question of absentee owners and their tenants.

"Renters treated as outsiders may be forgiven for acting like outsiders: if treated as neighbors, then there is a good chance they will become neighbors in the best sense of the word," reads the book.

Throughout the book is a discussion of the relevant California condominium laws, interpretations as to why they were passed and how they should be used to help improve relations between neighbors.

One of the best ways to avoid homeowner association tyranny is by increasing the involvement of homeowners. The more volunteers, the better the association.

However, Grimm and Lane recognize that "very few people have time to serve on their association board and those that have served know that it can be a thankless job carrying a ton of responsibility with no monetary compensation."

They recommend strong education and recruitment programs to involve members in their association.

There is even advice for associations that want to impeach an out-of-control board of directors.
